'Passed up bargain'

SFCC bond issue rejected third time

By MARY LOU VOSSMEYER
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

The State Fair Community College bond issue failed to draw the necessary two-thirds majority vote at the polls Tuesday, marking the third time it has been defeated in recent years.

The bond issue, which would have enabled the college to erect two permanent buildings, received only a 54.7 per cent favorable vote. A two-thirds majority was needed for passage. The count was 4,614 in favor and 3,815 opposed.

"They've passed up probably the best bargain they'll ever have," college president Fred Davis said, after the final votes had been counted.

"Probably the most disappointing thing to me was that it didn't even carry by a two-thirds majority in Sedalia," Davis said.

The city of Sedalia missed that majority by about 5 per cent. Voters in the city cast 3,074 votes in favor and 1,816 against the issue, for only a 62.8 per cent majority.

In Benton County, the bond issue failed to draw a simple majority with only 568 votes in favor of the issue and 1,343 against it.

Most Sedalia precincts gave the $5.5 million proposal only a simple majority. However, the second precinct of the Fourth Ward tallied 331 votes in favor of the issue with only 78 against.

Three Sedalia precincts failed to draw a simple majority.

Davis said he considering the voting in many areas light in respect to the number of registered voters. Less than 5,000 of Sedalia's 12,586 registered voters went to the polls. The number of persons voting on the issue totaled 8,429, with more than 6,000 of the votes coming from surrounding Pettis County townships. Less than 2,000 voters in Benton County cast votes.

By comparison, in the 1972 presidential election, Pettis County drew 15,409 voters to the polls. In December, 1969, when SFCC tried unsuccessfully for the second time to pass a levy, 10,370 voters made it to the polls. The first attempt at passing the bond was in October, 1969.

Davis said that SFCC can now, as an alternative, use the money from the Yeater estate and "build almost one building and then the money will be gone."

If voters had passed the issue, Davis said the money from the estate could have been invested, and its value increased over a period of time.

Incumbent Democrats survive in heavy primary voter turnout

By JOE KELL
Democrat-Capital Staffwriter

Incumbent Democrats Ira Knox and Lee Garrison survived primary contests Tuesday to move into the April 2 general election for City Council seats.

Knox won handily over Thomas H. Kindle in the Second Ward, compiling 328 votes against 179 for Kindle, or a margin of 149 votes.

Knox defeated Kindle in all four Second Ward precincts, collecting 61 absentee ballots, as compared to nine for Kindle.

Garrison experienced a closer race against Ben Pummill in the Fourth Ward, defeating Pummill by 87 votes, 484 to 397.

Garrison ran ahead of Pummill in three out of four Fourth Ward precincts, losing only the second precinct by 42 votes.

Also in the Fourth Ward, Robert W. Eidson edged Betty Tagtmeyer for the Republican nomination and the right to challenge Garrison by a slim 38-vote margin, the closest of the four primary contests.

Eidson polled a total of 241 votes, winning all four precincts, with the closest vote in the second precinct, 77-75.

Lyle W. McMullin, a Republican, will face Knox in the Second Ward regular election. He gained 202 votes.

The only other head-to-head contest was in the Third Ward between Republicans Don Carver and H. H. Hagen. Carver emerged with the victory, 168-118, a margin of 50 votes. Carver will face incumbent Democrat Bob Wells, who polled 603 votes. He had no opposition.

Democrat George Thompson outpolled Republican Mayor Jerry Jones 2,473 to 1,507 in the primary election, besting Jones in all 16 precincts in the city.

County Republican chairman Leroy Iuchs estimated that based on past voting records and other indicators, there are about "2,800 solid Republican voters" in the city. City Democratic officials were unable to provide similar figures.

Independent mayoral candidate Charles E. Lee Jr. collected 61 votes.

In the First Ward, where none of the council candidates faced opposition, incumbent Democrat Jesse "Sonny" Robinson collected 803 votes, Republican Allen Hawkins 410 and independent Norman D. Capps 38. All three men will be on the April 2 ballot.

In other city races, Lawrence N. Englund, incumbent Democratic police judge, received 2,522 primary votes, while his opponent, Republican Ralph Hamlin, received 1,297 votes.

Mrs. Opal Hugelmann, running unopposed for the city collector position, and the incumbent Democrat, led all vote-getters with 2,719 votes.

City attorney Robert M. Liston, a Democrat also running unopposed, received 2,561 votes.

A total of 4,315 ballots were cast in the primary Tuesday, representing 34.3 per cent of the city's registered voters. City Clerk Ralph Dedrick said the turnout was considered fairly heavy for a primary election.

Anonymous cards attack parking policy

City Democratic Party officials and mayoral candidate George Thompson Wednesday denied any involvement in the recent distribution of anonymous cards attacking Mayor Jerry Jones' policy of granting free parking permits to city employees.

At Monday's City Council meeting, Jones announced he had rescinded his action.

The business-sized cards, which were placed on cars in the downtown area recently, read: "Mr. Taxpayer, Mr. Workingman, you must pay the meters. Mr. Jones and some employees have free parking permits. Vote for this to change." The cards are not attributed to any organization.

City Democratic Chairman Charles "Chuck" Stockstill said the card distribution "wasn't any of the official party's action... none of us ever suggested it. There are ways to campaign, but I don't feel this is one of them."

Thompson, who had been out of town the past week, said he was not aware of the incident when contacted Wednesday.

"I don't know who did it, but I certainly would like to know," Thompson said. "If I knew, I'd put a stop to it immediately. This is no way to conduct any sort of campaign."

Jones himself expressed regret over the incident, adding, "It is not surprising that some people are stooping to this sort of underhanded technique. I'm not blaming anyone specifically, but I guess I kind of expected it somewhere along the line."

Jones said he had heard that the cards "were the first in a series of five" to be distributed during the campaign for mayor. The Democrat-Capital learned that the cards were printed by Earl Bell, operator of the City Printer Co.

Bell Wednesday said he was paid $10.50 to print 1,000 cards, but indicated he did not know his customer's name.

"He asked me if he had to give his name and I said no, as long as you're paying cash on the barrelhead," Bell said.

'Streak week' at Missouri, Kansas colleges

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There were signs that "streak week" at Kansas and Missouri colleges might come to a climax of sorts tonight when 17,500 fans are gathered in Allen Fieldhouse to watch the showdown basketball game between Kansas and Kansas State.

At stake not only is the Big Eight basketball championship but the mythical rating as No. 1 in streaking.

That title is claimed at the moment by the University of Missouri at Columbia after about 600 danced in a nude and coed congo line threading its way among the historic columns on Francis Quadrangle about midnight Tuesday.

Earlier, an estimated 4,000 cheered as about 400 nude men and at least one nude woman streaked about four blocks through Greek Town, a part of the Missouri campus occupied mostly by fraternities and sororities.

After the streak dance at the columns, witnesses reported a half-nude man and a half-nude woman riding a white horse and two men riding nude through town on a motorcycle.

A day of less flamboyant streaking at the University of Kansas culminated about midnight with 30 streakers dashing about four blocks along Jayhawk Boulevard, the main campus thoroughfare, to Watson Library, where they held a pep rally on the steps for the basketball game, drawing a crowd estimated at 1,000.

Neither at Lawrence nor Columbia did police make any arrests.

"They're having fun and really not hurting anybody so far," one Lawrence police authority said.

"When they do, it will be a different story."

The unseasonable, spring-like weather, with daytime highs in the 60s, was just right for "streak week."

At Wichita State University, seven students who call themselves "The Ma Fox Streaker," claimed a world record after a three-quarter mile jaunt across the campus Saturday night.

Four of the seven were arrested by police but released at the request of the university.

At the University of Kansas, a "mass streak" was reported late Tuesday night featuring some 30 nude males running and cavorting their way down Stewart Avenue. Other smaller groups streaked down the campus' main drag, Jayhawk Boulevard, which was lined with some 1,000 students, many of them cheering.

Disappointing returns

The defeat of the State Fair Community College bond issue was followed step-by-step Tuesday evening in the office of SFCC president Fred Davis. As each polling station reported, the results were brought in by Mrs. Betty Blackwell, center, Davis' secretary, and Davis would compute the figures and percentages, occasionally shaking his head at defeat of the issue became imminent. Here, SFCC Board of Trustees president William Hopkins, left, Mrs. Blackwell and Davis compute the returns from Benton County.

Senate schedules vote today on overriding energy bill veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today announced his promised veto of energy emergency legislation, saying it would result in reduced energy supplies, longer lines at the gasoline pumps, minimal reduction in gasoline prices and "worst of all serious damage to jobs in America."

Anticipating the veto, the Senate scheduled a vote on overriding later in the day.

Nixon said it was "with a deep sense of disappointment" that he sent back the bill without his approval after Congress has worked on it for almost four months.

But, Nixon said, it "threatens to undo the progress we have already made, and creates a host of new problems."

"Unemployment would go up and income would go down" as a result of the bill's proposed rollback of domestic crude oil prices, the President contended.

Nixon said the proposed bill would set the oil prices "at such low levels that the oil industry would be unable to sustain its present production of petroleum products, including gasoline" and that is the basis for his dire predictions about its impact.

Nixon said it would "make compulsory rationing of gasoline more likely" by cutting the supply of gasoline and other oil products.

Nixon also said the bill was "objectionable because it would establish an unworkable and inequitable program of unemployment payments."

He said it would saddle the government with what he described as the impossible task of determining which unemployed workers were jobless because of the energy situation. Eligibility for such benefits also would not take into account the availability of jobs in a particular area, Nixon said.

A two-thirds vote in both houses was required to override Nixon's veto. In advance of the balloting, the Senate was considered more likely than the House to do so.

Senate Interior Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., floor manager of the long-stalled bill, predicted the vote would be very close. Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., said: "I would say at this point that the probability is slightly in favor of the veto being sustained in the Senate."

The Senate originally passed the bill by a greater than two-thirds margin, while the House vote fell 15 short of the needed two-thirds.

Even before the House vote, Nixon said he would veto the bill principally because he believes its rollback provision would lead to decreased oil production and longer gasoline lines.

The current Congress has overridden only one of nine previous vetoes, enacting the measure limiting the President's war-making powers.

Jackson has claimed that the oil rollback would reduce the pump price of gasoline by up to five cents a gallon and cut soaring propane prices in half. The administration, backed by Republicans and members from oil-producing states, contends that the rollback would make it unprofitable for the oil companies to expand their production.

Grand jury material to go to committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon informed the House Judiciary Committee today he will give it all the material he has already turned over to the Watergate grand jury "without limitation."

The President also offered to answer written questions and submit to an oral interview if the committee is not satisfied with the written answers.

Nixon's decision was announced by James D. St. Clair, the President's chief Watergate lawyer, at a hearing called to hear arguments on the disposition of a sealed grand jury report.

St. Clair told U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica that the White House would offer no recommendation as to what the judge should do with the sealed report which sources have indicated contains grand jury findings on the President's role in Watergate.

St. Clair disclosed that the report is 1½ to 2 pages long; that it is in addition to the briefcase containing grand jury evidence which was given the judge along with the sealed presentment.

During a recess St. Clair told reporters the President would be willing to undergo more than one interview by the Judiciary Committee and that there would be no objection to his speaking under oath.

St. Clair also said, "We can probably make delivery of some documentation this afternoon." He said that included some of 19 tapes and more than 700 documents requested by the committee.

On whether Nixon's possible testimony would be given in an open or closed hearing, St. Clair said, "I haven't given consideration to that."

Asked why the President turned down the grand jury's request for such testimony but is willing to give it before a committee of the House, St. Clair said:

"This is a unique proceeding involving the House of Representatives and the President of the United States and therefore it's deserving in my view of unique procedures."

He said the mechanics of the proposal to supply the House with the materials and the President's testimony will have to be worked out with the committee.

Referring to news accounts about the sealed report, St. Clair said, "We consider there has been a serious breach of grand jury secrecy."

He said also the published reports represented a "gross distortion of its contents."

Juvenile confesses over 50 crimes here

Police Chief William Miller announced Wednesday morning that a 16-year-old Sedalia youth who is currently serving a sentence at the State Training School for Boys in Boonville, had confessed his involvement in 52 crimes in the Sedalia area since 1972.

Miller said he received a call early last week from authorities in Boonville stating that the youth wanted to speak to Miller. Miller said he spoke with the boy by telephone to obtain information on the youth's activities in Pettis County.

Assistant Chief Charles Knapp and Det. Sgt. Perry Franklin were sent to Boonville to talk with the youth and obtain more detailed information.

According to the youth, the 52 incidents ranged from breaking and entering, car theft and a mugging to bicycle theft.

Miller said information given by the youth concerning some of the crimes left little doubt that he was telling the truth.

"We've had problems with the boy in the past," Miller said. "We had suspected him in a number of the incidents but could do nothing due to lack of evidence and the fact that he was a juvenile."

Miller said the incidents went back to early 1972 and included some that police did not have reports on. The youth told officers, for example, that he stole a truck and drove it around Sedalia during the night and returned it before the owners noticed it was missing. He also reported stealing a car and driving it around the city and returning it before it was found missing.

Three of the incidents were reported to have occurred in Pettis County. Miller said details on these cases have been given to the Pettis County sheriff's department.

When asked why he thought the youth confessed to the incidents, Miller said it appeared the boy was "a changed person and wanted to get this off his chest."

Miller said that several other persons have been interviewed because they were involved in some of the incidents in a "roundabout" way and that they had verified the information given by the youth.

Miller also said that "a couple of others" had been implicated by the youth and that one of them appeared to be involved in a crime of a "more serious nature." Miller declined to elaborate.

The youth was reportedly sent to Boonville earlier this year to serve time for parole violation but Pettis County Juvenile

Will discuss problems of health here

Authoritative information on two major health problems existing in schools across the state, alcoholism and smoking, will be offered from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Friday at the Smith-Cotton High School auditorium.

The workshop, designed to promote the development of a comprehensive health education program by parents and in local schools, will feature a panel of authorities who will present information on smoking and alcoholism.

Scheduled to appear on the program are Dr. Robert Taylor, state Department of Education; Connie Daugherty, Missouri Heart Association; and Ed Spurling, state Division of Mental Health.

Also to appear on the program will be personnel from many educational and health agencies. Displays depicting curriculum materials on health problems currently being used at Smith-Cotton will be exhibited.

Representatives from area Missouri Congress of Parents and Teachers groups will also attend the seminar, which is one of several being held throughout the state.

Substitute campaign reform bill planned

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. Vic Downing, D-Bragg City, said Tuesday he will offer a substitute bill for a campaign reform measure expected to be debated by the House within the next two weeks.

Downing, chairman of the House Elections Committee, said the committee had rushed to get the bill on an already crowded House calendar and time was not available to give it proper consideration.

Dry weather is threatening wheat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dry weather in portions of the southwest is continuing to threaten winter wheat development, according to a weekly weather report by the Agriculture Department.

The report, issued Tuesday, said warm temperatures last week helped wheat growth in Kansas and Oklahoma but added that high winds helped deplete soil moisture in parts of the area.

Death penalty, no-fault favored

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Reinstatement of the death penalty, no-fault auto insurance, retention of the Sunday blue laws and ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment were favored by most of the people answering a poll taken this month by Rep. Gary Rust, R-Cape Girardeau.

Rust distributed 9,800 questionnaires in his district and compiled results after getting 1,159 answers.

Reinstatement of the death penalty was favored by 946 persons, or 81 per cent. Some form of no-fault auto insurance was favored by 812 or 70 per cent.

The so-called blue law against sales of certain products on Sundays received 539, or 47 per cent, for repeal and 559, or 48 per cent, against repeal.

Lowering the age of majority (legal age) to 18 was opposed by 671, or 58 per cent.

Rust quoted the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which failed in the Missouri legislature last year and has made little progress this year.

"Equality under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."

Answering yes were 657, or 65.5 per cent, against 396 no votes.

Sixty-six per cent, or 772, were opposed to state aid to non-public schools, and 64 per cent, or 803, favored a right-to-work law.

A proposal to exempt food and drugs from sales tax favored by 846, or 73.8 per cent.

Whether newsmen's sources should be protected by a shield law drew 577 against and 414 for.

Over half, or 596, opposed raising the limit on long-term loan interest rates from 8 to 10 per cent.

Over half answering the poll favored legalized abortions, legalized gambling, no change in the two-thirds vote requirement for most bond issues, and unionization for school teachers and public employees such as policemen and firefighters.

However, while majorities favored collective bargaining for public employees, a majority opposed giving them the right to strike.

Sixty-one per cent, 709, said they thought Gov. Christopher S. Bond was doing a good job, 12 per cent said no and 27 per cent were undecided about the legislature, with 478, or 41.8 per cent saying they were undecided.

Standardized education reports are proposed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Missouri Commission on Higher Education proposed Monday that steps be taken to standardize information reporting procedures on the cost of off-campus education.

At the suggestion of Dr. Jack L. Cross, executive secretary, the commission agreed to call a meeting of a representative of each institution, public and private, under its jurisdiction to discuss the answers to questionnaires now provided by the commission.

The decision was reached after Central State Missouri University representatives presented a detailed cost-accounting report on off-campus education. That came during the commission's regular monthly meeting here.

Dr. Warren C. Lovinger, CMSU president, said he had asked to appear before the commission to show how the university had compiled its report, which showed a loss of $182,000 for off-campus education.

Lovinger, already the center of a controversy involving the commission and the Missouri Legislature on an over-appropriation CMSU received on the basis of faulty enrollment figures, indicated he felt the Warrensburg school's reporting system went into more detail than that used by other institutions.

"I think the figures are accurate for our institution," Lovinger said.

Dr. Duane R. Sterling, the CMSU professor in charge of preparing the report, outlined how the report was compiled on a person-by-person basis for each instructor involved and all areas of cost considered.

H. Lang Rogers of Joplin, commission chairman, responded that the CMSU breakdown was a "foot-in-the-door approach" that might well be followed by all reporting institutions. Cross noted, however, that what the commission needs is the direct cost of each course offered in off-campus education.

In other action, the commission referred to committee a CMSU application for a federal grant to fund study of improvements at the university-owned airport in Warrensburg.

The university is seeking a grant of $15,280 through the Federal Aviation Administration to determine cost and feasibility of lengthening and resurfacing runways.

Rogers said the commission's "hesitancy" in acting on the CMSU application stemmed from being unfamiliar with all the facts. He said the group's programs committee would report at the April 1 meeting in Columbia.

The commission also approved a resolution commending retiring members Henry C. Haskell of Kansas City and L.M. Crouch Jr. of Harrisonville. Both were original members of the commission and had served 10 years. They were not reappointed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Rogers praised Haskell and Crouch for "truly sincere, dedicated service and for great contributions to the commission."

Revenue-sharing investment source

WASHINGTON (AP) — The revenue-sharing program is providing a new touch of financial irony. The federal government is borrowing back some of its own tax money.

Nobody in the federal Revenue Sharing Office knows exactly how much, although a survey taken last June showed that a large portion of unspent federal revenue sharing money was being invested either in U.S. treasury notes or bank certificates of deposit.

One reason the revenue sharing program has turned into a source of money for investment by state and local governments is that they are not in the financial pinch that they were a few years ago.

At the same time, state and local governments have earmarked a large portion of their money for capital projects that take a long time to build and which do not require immediate expenditures.

A report issued by the Revenue Sharing Office last week showed that as of last June 30, state governments had spent only about 45 per cent of $2.2 billion in revenue sharing money and local governments had spent about 40 per cent of about $4 billion.

Graham Watt, director of the office, said another survey taken early last spring showed that state and local governments had invested almost $2 billion in revenue sharing funds, some in government securities and others in bank certificates of deposit.

He said under the law the money must be disbursed to state and local governments and put into a trust fund. The Treasury Department cannot withhold the money, he added.

Watt also said that state and local governments have up to two years to spend the money and added that it is only natural that they would invest some of it.

The treasury official said that state and local governments held about $28.9 billion of the federal debt, an increase of $300 million from a year earlier.

This apparently means that the revenue sharing program is not causing a great upsurge in government securities held by state and local governments, the official said.

Safety standards for TV sets coming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peter Young lost his wife, infant daughter and mother-in-law on New Year's Day last year when their Summit, N.J., home was swept by fire blamed by local authorities on a defective television set.

Young, hospitalized 45 days for treatment of his injuries, has since seen his personal tragedy duplicated twice in neighboring New Jersey suburbs.

On June 23, Edward McDonough and his three children perished in a similar inferno in Roseland and, on Aug. 25, Wall Street executive Frederick Stock Jr., his wife, their three children and two visiting nieces died of smoke inhalation in North Caldwell.

"Total is 14 dead," Young wired the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission in Washington. "There is good chance that certain brand TV sets constitute the most potent consumer hazard in America today."

Young's letters and wire prompted a commission investigation, which resulted Monday in an announcement that mandatory safety standards will be developed for TV sets.

In addition, the commission is inviting leading TV manufacturers, consumer groups and individuals to a public hearing April 23-24 in Washington to air the issue.

As evidence that more than coincidence was involved in the New Jersey fires, the commission pointed to these findings:

—From consumer complaints, news stories and hospital emergency room cases last year, the commission learned of 35 TV-related accidents resulting in 14 deaths by fire, 2 deaths by electrical shock and at least 10 injuries requiring medical treatment.

—A survey by its field offices of cities with a combined total of 21.7 million persons turned up 916 incidents within a one-year period blamed by local fire officials on TV sets. One person was killed, one hospitalized and three treated for burns or smoke inhalation.

—Consumers sent in 27 letters last year complaining that TV sets had started 15 fires and two explosions; that two picture tubes shattered and reporting one instance of a set smoking.

—The commission's computerized hookup with hospital emergency rooms across the country turned up 681 injuries associated with TV sets in fiscal 1973 and 359 in the first half of fiscal 1974. The figures represent 2 per cent of such cases treated annually.

Kissinger escapes planned assassination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger escaped an apparent assassination attempt in Syria because his talks with President Hafez Assad ran late and kept him from sightseeing at a famous mosque, U.S. officials said.

Kissinger had a visit to the Omayyad Mosque on his schedule last Wednesday in Damascus, but he was up until almost 4 a.m. conferring with Assad about a possible disengagement with Israel and then returned to see the Syrian leader after a few hours' sleep.

As a result, the officials said, Kissinger canceled the stop at the eighth-century shrine near the heart of a crowded market area. Instead, he drove to the airport and flew to keep an appointment with Israeli leaders in Jerusalem.

But he planned to visit the Mosque Saturday morning when he returned to Syria with Israel's proposals.

Kissinger was flying back to Damascus Friday night when word first came to him about the plot, the officials said. He decided to play it safe and avoid the shrine on his second visit.

Palestinian terrorists apparently were behind the reported attempt to slay the secretary.

Murder suspect is still being sought in case

Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said Wednesday he still does not know the whereabouts of the prime suspect in the Charles L. Buis murder case.

The suspect, a 33-year-old woman, was last seen Dec. 31 in Memphis, Tenn.

Buis, 40, a former sergeant at Whiteman AFB, was found Feb. 23 in his parked camper at Bob's Camper Sales, South Highway 65. An autopsy showed that Buis died of a gunshot wound to the heart. Sheriff's officers believe he was killed in late December.

Fairfax said he has notified authorities in "several states," including North Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee to be on the lookout for the woman, a native of North Carolina. He said his department also has checked a lead in California.

"Making an investigation by long distance is a slow process," Fairfax said. He has declined to disclose the name of the woman. He says it may hinder efforts to locate her.

Sheriff's officers were told last week that Buis' car had been located in Memphis.

The woman, who was driving the car, was picked up by Memphis police Dec. 27 after she attempted to run a roadblock. The woman earlier was seen driving the car in an erratic manner, and officers had attempted to apprehend her then, but she resisted.

Fairfax said she was sentenced to 30 days in a Memphis jail on three driving violations, but released Dec. 31 after serving only four days of the sentence. The rest of the sentence was suspended, he said.

On Dec. 22, Fairfax said, the same woman was arrested in Pemiscot County, Missouri, on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Earlier this week Fairfax received a report on Buis' car after Memphis authorities had "processed" the vehicle.

Law officers here also processed Buis' camper for possible evidence.

Fairfax said fingerprints were obtained from both the camper and the car. "But until we get something to compare them to," Fairfax said, referring to the suspect's fingerprints, "we don't have much to go on."

Authorities believe Buis' vehicle was taken from the camper sales lot about the same time he was shot.

Officers have ruled out suicide in the case, since no firearms were found in Buis' trailer.

Fairfax said the woman was Buis' former girl friend.

Vinson's Market is burglars' target

Burglars broke into Vinson's Market, 27th and Ingram, sometime Tuesday night and took an undetermined amount of change from a pinball machine.

According to police, entry to the store was gained by breaking a window on the south side of the building. A pool table was also damaged.

In other police news, a citizen's band radio, worth $70, was stolen from a pick-up truck belonging to Wayne Sweeting, 1515½ South Grand.

Sweeting told police the theft occurred sometime Tuesday night. The vehicle was not locked at the time.

Bond issue approval for Sweet Springs

(Democrat-Capital Service)

SWEET SPRINGS — Voters approved a $600,062 school bond issue here Tuesday, paving the way for construction of a new grade school building and high school gymnasium.

The issue was approved by a 598-154 margin, with 79.5 per cent favoring the bond issue.

Construction is scheduled to begin this summer on a "middle school" which will house grades four through six. Projected completion date for the project is September 1975.

Hair length dispute is ended; suit is dismissed

A civil suit filed Feb. 20 in a hair length dispute was dismissed Tuesday in Pettis County Circuit Court.

The suit was dismissed by Circuit Court Judge Frank Meyer after the attorney for the plaintiffs, Donnie Carr, 11, and Dale Carr, 10, Route 1, Marshall, asked that the suit be dismissed.

The two children were barred from attending the Houstonia Elementary School Feb. 20 because they refused to get haircuts.

The suit had asked that a temporary restraining order, permanent injunction and declaratory judgment be issued against the school and the school board of the Pettis County R-5 School District.

Eldon Kreisel, principal of the elementary school, said Wednesday that the Carr children have transferred to another school. He said he didn't know which school, though.

President Fred Davis . . .

"They'll never get a bargain like this again..."

SFCC

One of the main reasons for the bond issue was to erect a vocational-technical education building to offer courses for students in high schools that could not afford to develop their own. The State Department of Education requires Missouri schools to offer a certain number of vocational credit units by July 1, 1976.

"I was very disappointed on the votes in some of the school districts. It probably means more to them than to us," Davis said.

"Those schools will have to handle their own (programs) ... we don't have the space for them. That's the sad part, we can't do it because we don't have the facilities to do it," Davis said.

SFCC Board of Trustees president William Hopkins said, "It's a little difficult to understand. School bond issues have been passing real well in the rest of the state these past few weeks. It's puzzling why we can't do it here."

"It's not the end of the world, but it certainly is depressing ... Especially because of the outstanding programs developing here," Hopkins said.

Davis said he was proud of SFCC staff and student work on the election. He said "they've been honest ... it's probably a bigger blow to them than to us."

Davis said the board probably will not try to put the issue before the voters again.

"Even if we put it through again in another three or four months, costs will have gone up. I don't think I could go through another one," he added.

Senate votes to cut off raise debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 67 to 31 today to cut off debate on pay raise legislation for Congress and other high government officials.

The vote was one more than the required two thirds majority and pointed toward killing the President Nixon's budget.

Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., a supporter of the pay raises and chairman of the committee handling the legislation, immediately said "the Senate has expressed its will."

He said his committee will conduct hearings this spring looking toward a revision of the 1967 law under which the higher pay would automatically go into effect at midnight Saturday unless disapproved by the Senate or the House.

A resolution of disapproval is before the Senate and, if adopted, will kill the pay raises without any action by the House.

Pay raises for members of Congress, federal judges and top executive branch officials were included in President Nixon's budget and will go into effect automatically unless disapproved by the Senate or House before midnight Saturday.

The increases, with a few exceptions, amount to 7.5 per cent this year and for each of the next two years and would be the first since 1969.

The salaries of senators and House members, now $42,500 a year, would go up to $52,800 by 1976.

Craig Cassing, attorney for the Carrs, was unavailable for comment Wednesday. The Carrs also could not be reached.

According to the petition, the Carrs were told by school officials that they would not be allowed to attend classes until they obeyed the school's dress code and got haircuts.

Kreisel said the students had not returned to school after they were told that they couldn't attend classes.

Kreisel added that, to his knowledge, the school board has not changed the hair length regulation which the petition disputed.

The request in the petition for a temporary restraining order asked that the school not be allowed to prohibit the Carrs from attending school until the case ultimately was settled in court.

The petition also asked that the court declare the hair length policy unconstitutional.

Civil cases are dismissed out of court

Three civil suits were dismissed Tuesday in Pettis County Circuit Court after out-of-court settlements were reached.

The first suit was filed Nov. 29, 1972, by Georgetown and the late Ralph Randall, 2008 East Seventh, against the Goodyear Store, 601 South Ohio.

Randall, who died in January, 1973, was seeking $10,000 damages for injuries he sustained Oct. 20, 1972, when he allegedly fell over a tool box in an aisle at the Goodyear Store. According to information in the case file, Mr. Randall's death was not a result of injuries he sustained in the alleged accident.

His wife was seeking $2,500 for injuries to her husband.

In the second suit, John F. Clemons, North Kansas City, was seeking $25,000 each from defendants Robert Smith, 1104 South Kentucky and David Aldrich, Route 4. The suit was filed Feb. 29, 1972.

Clemons contended in the suit that he was injured March 4, 1967, in an auto accident at 16th and Sneed when a car driven by Aldrich collided with a car driven by Smith. Clemons was a passenger in the auto driven by Aldrich, according to the petition.

The third suit, filed April 28, 1972, involved the Navajo Freight Lines versus Bilyeu Refrigerated Transport Co., Box 1254, Sedalia.

Navajo sought $7,551.16 from Bilyeu for expenses Navajo incurred in 1966 when it represented itself in compensation hearings and civil action resulting from the accidental death of one of the company's truck drivers.

Navajo said that since Bilyeu was leasing the truck and driver's services at the time of the accident, it was responsible for fees connected with the death.

The case was to go before a Pettis County Circuit Court jury Feb. 20, but lawyers for both parties said they would settle the case out-of-court.

Begin talks on ending coal strike

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the miners union and the National Coal Board began urgent talks today aimed at ending Britain's nationwide coal strike. They were under orders from the new Labor government to "settle it quickly."

Union general secretary Lawrence Daly said before the meeting he hoped to reach a solution by the end of the day.

Coal board chairman Derek Ezra said: "I'm very hopeful that we shall succeed, but I don't know whether it will be today. There are a lot of problems to be discussed and settled."

The two sides were expected to ignore a pay board report on the relative pay of miners and workers in other industries. The union has already said the report does not give sufficient help to surface workers and clerks.

The pay board, appointed by the ousted Conservative government, conceded underground miners are entitled to special treatment because of the conditions of their work and proposed pay increases averaging more than 30 per cent.

The proposal fell short of union demands and appeared doomed to oblivion in view of the Labor government's instruction that negotiators can ignore it.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson's new Labor government cleared the way for quick action by telling the miners' union and the National Coal Board they could ignore the anti-inflation ceiling on pay raises imposed by Wilson's Conservative predecessor, Edward Heath.

Once the miners agree to return to work, Wilson is expected to end the three-day work week Heath ordered before Christmas for much of British industry and business to conserve coal-supplied electric power.

The 280,000 miners refused to work overtime and weekends in November and then went on strike 25 days ago to back their demand for pay raises well above the seven per cent ceiling set by Heath.

The Conservative prime minister called an election to rally support against the miners and lost. One factor in Heath's defeat may have been the finding, a week before the voting, that the miners were entitled to more than they had been asking.

Rabourn to seek position on board

Bill Rabourn, Walnut Hills, Monday filed as the fourth candidate for the State Fair Community College Board of Trustees.

Rabourn, who was director of business affairs at the college for five and one-half years before resigning last spring, Wednesday said he filed "because I feel that, based on my educational background and professional experience, I can be a definite asset to the board."

Rabourn emphasized that he was familiar "not only with the goals for junior colleges in general, as stated by the state Department of Education, but also with the aims of SFCC specifically. I believe my education and experience have adequately prepared me with a well-rounded background."

Rabourn currently owns and manages Clean Car Inc.

The deadline for filing for the April 2 board election was Monday. Other candidates for the board are Dr. C. Gordon Stauffacher, 1313 West Broadway; C. R. Leppert, Lincoln; and Clarence Frisch, Lincoln.

EPA orders recall of Chrysler vehicles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency today ordered the recall of some 826,000 Chrysler cars and trucks — about half of the company's 1973 production — for correction of a faulty antipollution device.

Administrator Russell E. Train said Chrysler itself noticed the defect and reported it to EPA. Chrysler was directed to notify owners of recalled vehicles and pay the repair costs.

The company reported that a temperature-sensing device, which activates an exhaust gas recirculation system to reduce emissions of nitrogen oxide, was shifting its response upward. That meant the antipollution system would not start working until the engine was at a higher temperature.

Train said the defect would cause the release of nitrogen oxides between 15 and 60 per cent above the federal antipollution limit of three grams per mile.

The recall covers all Chrysler cars produced after March 15, 1973, plus about 1,000 Chrysler trucks.

Gov. Sargent favors Ford over Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Gov. Francis W. Sargent of Massachusetts said today the country would be better off if President Nixon were to leave office and Vice President Gerald Ford replace him.

"I don't think impeachment would upset the country," Sargent said, "and I don't agree with the suggestions that Vice President Ford wouldn't be up to the job."

"I think the contrast of Ford being an open and frank person would be a contrast that should be refreshing," Sargent said in an interview at the National Governors Conference.

Asked if he was saying the country would be better off with Ford as President than with Nixon, Sargent said "reluctantly, I would say yes."

Georgia Gov. Jimmie Carter, a Democrat, said in another interview that he favored removal of President Nixon by whatever means possible but preferably through impeachment and an open airing of the facts in the Watergate scandal.

"I'm for impeachment if there is not a quicker way," Carter said. "However, impeachment would bring out the facts while a resignation would not."

Earlier, the conference chairman called on the Nixon administration to suspend temporarily the requirement that states match federal highway funds.

Minimum wage bill defeated in Senate

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill to set a $2 minimum wage in Missouri was defeated in the Missouri Senate today by a vote of 16-17.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Robert Young, D-St. Ann, had been amended several times in the last few days to exclude many types of employees, such as farm laborers, domestic workers, youths under 19 and college students.

Attempts have been made for the last two decades to pass a minimum wage bill in Missouri, but all have failed. Supporters of the legislation say 42 other states have such laws and it is needed in Missouri because low-paid workers cannot keep up with spiraling costs of food and other items.

Opponents said higher wages will only increase consumer costs.

In other action today, the Senate voted 21-12 to reconsider its vote of Tuesday against giving full funding to Missouri Western College at St. Joseph and Missouri Southern at Joplin. The Senate took up debate again on the bill, sponsored by Sen. Truman Wilson, D-St. Joseph.

The Senate then gave first-round approval to the bill, 17-16. The bill will need 18 affirmative votes for final passage.

Sen. Albert Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau criticized the bill, saying it gave favored treatment to the junior college districts which operate the first two years of instruction at the St. Joseph and Joplin schools.

Meanwhile, the House gave first-round approval to bills that would let junior college districts hire campus policemen and to make it a misdemeanor to possess street signs.

A policeman on a junior college campus could carry a gun. He must take 320 hours of instruction from the Missouri Highway Patrol within six months after being hired.

The House debated until nearly 7 p.m. Tuesday and gave first-round approval on a bill allowing port authorities to be established in cities and counties on navigable streams. The measure is aimed primarily at St. Louis.

Officer James Newland could not be contacted to verify the reason for the youth's confinement.

Miller said that police would like to take some further action against the youth following his release from Boonville.

However, since the crimes were committed while the boy was still a juvenile, there is a good chance that the case would be handled in juvenile court, Miller said.

Learned to be a lovable wife

By MRS. NORMAN VINCENT
PEALE

Not so long ago a friend of mine telephoned and asked if she could come see me. My heart sank a bit, because I knew her marriage was not going well and I was sure she wanted to talk about it.

She was a handsome woman, successful in her job, married to an energetic and equally successful man. So far as I knew, neither of them was involved with anyone else. But, clearly there was something wrong between them.

When she arrived — I'll call her Florence — she came straight to the point. "Ruth," she said, "Jack has decided he wants a divorce."

Saddened, I asked why. Florence gave a shrug that seemed half-angry, half-resigned. "He says he just doesn't love me," she said.

I repressed the impulse to say something falsely reassuring. Instead I said, "He must have his reasons. What are they?"

She looked down into her lap. "He says I'm not lovable."

I hesitated a moment, then asked, "Well, are you lovable?"

She looked up sharply. "What do you mean?"

"I mean," I said, trying to choose my words carefully, "that evidently Jack has a definite idea of what a lovable person is, and you aren't measuring up."

"But it's not fair!" she cried. "I'm a good wife to Jack. I'm faithful to him. Our home is efficiently run. I'm a good hostess. I contribute more than my share to family finances. I —"

"Maybe," I said, "those skills aren't what he has in mind when he talks about lovability."

Finally I said, "Florence, why don't we try to take a logical approach to all this? Jack considered you lovable once; otherwise he would never have asked you to marry him. Maybe we can figure out what the qualities were that he admired and how to put them back."

When our talk was over, we had decided that there are five basic characteristics that make a person lovable.

First of all, we agreed, a person must have the capacity to love and — just as important — the capacity to demonstrate it. If you feel affection, you have to show it; otherwise your partner may think you simply don't care. The second hallmark of lovability, we decided, is kindness. It's thinking more about your partner's happiness and peace of mind than about your own.

I told Florence about a woman my minister-husband once went to see in the hospital. She said to him, "Doctor Peale, I have cancer; the doctors think it may be terminal. My husband doesn't know this, and I don't want him to worry. I wish you'd tell him that everything is going to be all right."

Norman promised he would deliver the message. When he did, the husband said, "She thinks I don't know about it and so she's just trying to spare me. She never thinks of herself. She's the kindest, most unselfish, most lovable person I've ever known."

The third component of lovability, we decided, is honesty — especially self-honesty. It's almost impossible to love a person who's arrogant or domineering. But it's easy to love a person who sees his faults and admits them.

I told Florence how in our own marriage Norman and I had to learn to accept each other's shortcomings.

The fourth ingredient of lovability, we decided, is helpfulness. It's packing an overnight bag for your husband when he has to go on a sudden business trip. It's putting aside the sports section when your wife comes home with 10 bags of groceries that have to be carried into the kitchen.

The fifth requirement for lovability, we concluded, was the capacity for appreciation. We also felt that this is the quality most likely to be missing in shaky marriages.

"I'm afraid that's been true of ours," Florence said ruefully. "I've been so busy patting myself on the back about my contributions that I haven't bothered to appreciate Jack's."

"Really," I said, "I think it can happen with any marriage. Most housewives do far more work than they're usually given credit for."

"Likewise, most men spend only a tiny fraction of their income on themselves; the rest goes to support their families. Wouldn't it be wonderful if married partners now and then could say spontaneously to each other, 'I just want you to know that I think you're marvelous, that without you I couldn't begin to be happy. I'd never get by.'"

All that happened weeks ago. Jack and Florence are still together. I don't know whether their marriage will make it or not, but my hopes rise every day.

No two people are alike, no two marriages are alike, no two problems are alike. But I'm quite sure of one thing. If any wife will review her role in these five areas, she won't have to worry about how lovable she is. Her husband will be telling her, one way or another, for the rest of her life.

Piedmont voters pass bond issue

PIEDMONT, Mo. (AP) — Voters in this Southeast Missouri town passed a $500,000 bond issue Tuesday to build a new industrial building for the St. Louis-based International Hat Co.

Piedmont Mayor Roy Anderson said the building will be the first in a new industrial park and airport complex being planned by the city.

"The idea for this industrial complex was conceived in 1971," Anderson said, "and we're very pleased with its progress."

Anderson said the hat company plans to expand its production facilities with the Piedmont site and will employ 325 workers with an average annual payroll of $1.5 million.

The vote to approve the bond issue was 509-17.

LOSE 20 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS!

Famous U.S. Women Ski Team Diet

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team members go on the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right — 20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food action and was devised by a famous Colorado physician especially for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while reducing. You keep "full" — no starvation — because the diet is designed that way. It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay at home. (Not the grapefruit diet!).

This is, honestly, a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it! Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Lose weight the scientific, proven way. Even if you've tried all the other diets, you owe it to yourself to try the U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet. That is, if you really do want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Order today. Tear this out as a reminder.

Send only $3.00 ($3.25 for Rush Service) - cash is O.K. - to: NATIONAL HEALTH INSTITUTE, P.O. Box 39, Dept. 16, Durham, Calif. 95938. Don't order unless you want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks! Because that's what the Ski Team Diet will do.

Age shrinks tissue— causes denture slip

Dear Ann Landers: I work with a delightful lady. She's good-natured and attractive — except for one thing. Her dentures.

When she smiles, she exposes about two inches of upper gum. Her dentures often slip when she speaks, and recently I was scared to death they'd fall out at an office party.

I asked my dentist how a person could be unaware of such a thing. He said, "When the tissue shrinks, as it is bound to do with age, the dentures ought to be replaced. Some people don't know this." Should I tell my friend to get new dentures or keep quiet and not risk offending her? — Treading Lightly

Dear T.L.: Do her a favor. Tell her.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for the woman who complained because her husband grabbed at her all the time, made suggestive remarks in front of the children, and so on. She felt such behavior should be kept in the bedroom. My guess is that he wasn't getting much in the bedroom, either.

I had the same problem with my "Randy Andy," so I know what I'm talking about. A man who is satisfied is not always trying to get more. My advice to that woman is this: Put yourself out even if his carnal appetite is lustier than yours. Let your husband know you want him as much as he wants you, but ask him to please keep it behind closed doors. Also, tell him to call it LOVE, not SEX. There's a big difference. — Been Down That Same Road And Knew When To Turn

Dear Been D.T.R.: Thanks for the road map. Your directions are plenty explicit. And they make sense, too.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 14 and in my first year of high school. When I was very young I got into this habit of smelling my old, dirty baby blanket to help me fall asleep. My sisters did the same thing. But they gave up their blankets when they were six and seven. I've still got the habit. My old baby blanket fell apart years ago, so now I smell the bedspread instead. When I have girl friends sleep over I can't wait till the lights are out so I can grab a corner of the bedspread and start sniffing. Please tell me how to kick this habit. — Hooked

Dear H.: Try a substitute. Put some lovely perfume on your wrist, and sniff that instead.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a minister in a Southern town. People are supposed to come to me for advice and here I am writing to Ann Landers. Incredible!

I took this job five years ago. With the job came a 60-year-old sexton, a lonely man who lost his wife and has no children. The job is his whole life.

He hangs around after working hours, won't leave and is a great talker. The fellow is good-hearted and well-liked, but his nose is in everything. When parishioners come to see me he sits in my office and they won't talk in front of him.

I've asked him to please go home after work and not hang around. He says, "I'm sorry. You're right," pouts for a few days and then it's the same story.

My secretary has threatened to quit. My wife is fed up, and so am I. But I'm afraid to fire him because he has so many friends. Can you offer some advice before we all quit and leave him to run the place? — Stymied

Dear Reverend S.: Give the lovable pest one more warning. Either he leaves the church at quitting time or he's fired. Then, do it. And, if the congregation would rather have him than you, LET him run the place.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Elements of good diet

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am 55 and have been a heart patient for the past year. I take Coumadin and other medicines. I walk a mile a day and do my housework.

A year ago I weighed 155 pounds, now 140 pounds. I have to limit myself to 1000 calories per day to control my weight. What I need to know is, how many of these should be protein, carbohydrates and fat? I know I have to keep the fat low, but I'm afraid I'm getting too much carbohydrate. I drink three glasses of one per cent skim milk a day and eat very few starchy foods. My carbohydrates come from vegetables, fruit, cereals, skim milk and one slice of bread a day.

Dear Reader — You are getting over 150 calories of protein, or about 40 grams, from your skim milk. The new 1973 Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (from the National Research Council) for women over 51 is only 46 grams a day. So, you can see that you are getting about all the protein you need from the milk alone. I would think, though, that you should get some additional protein from other sources, including some lean fish, poultry and meat. In general, though, I would guess you are already getting enough protein.

The new values for protein requirements have actually been lowered on the basis of the most current research. I'm inclined to think that when you are trying to control your weight, it is wise to have a little more protein, but, otherwise, apparently most normal adults don't need more than 60 grams daily (240 calories of protein).

The rest of your calories can, and should, come from carbohydrates and a limited amount of fat. Vegetables, fruit, and cereal are fine foods. I would hope that your condition will permit you to be a little more active and a little less restrictive on your calories intake. A 1000 calories a day diet for a prolonged time is a marginal intake. I don't recommend this except under a doctor's supervision.

For more information on keeping a balanced diet write to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10022, and ask for the "Balanced diet" booklet. Send 50 cents to cover costs.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Kindly tell me what causes the pressure when one has glaucoma? My doctor said no cataract. I am 75. He told me to use eye drops. Could there be cancer? Should I follow a diet?

Dear Reader — The eye normally produces a certain amount of fluid inside the eyeball all the time. It should gradually seep out. The balance between the amount of fluid formed and the amount that is leaked out determines how much pressure is inside the eye.

Some people have a defect in the normal drainage mechanism from the eye. It can be caused by many different things. This causes the pressure to increase and results in glaucoma. You do not need to have cataracts to have glaucoma. They are not the same thing.

Anyone who has glaucoma should follow his doctor's advice to the letter. It can make the difference between keeping your sight and losing it.

No, glaucoma is not caused by cancer. (NEA)

Q — This is a problem we have and hope you can help us solve it. We cancelled our insurance policies Jan. 25 and sent the policies in to the company at that time requesting they be cancelled. Also, for them to refund the premium paid. We have received no reply or money. The insurance company is the Farmers and Merchants Insurance Co., Columbia.

We changed to a local based insurance firm because of problems we had changing coverage and we felt if an accident should occur, we would have problems getting claims settled. — L.I.

A — John Burnes, manager of the Silvey Co., informed Hot Line that the refunds were delivered to your agent, rather than directly to you, as a matter of company policy. Many agents, Burns said, customarily mail premium refunds to clients at the end of the month. Because your cancellation order was made in late January, the actual entry on your agent's books was probably made for February. Hence, Burns said, your agent should have mailed you the premium refunds at the end of February.

Q — Why doesn't Bothwell Hospital have a kidney machine? I have heard of several people from this area who have had the need for one and have had to go to Kansas City or Columbia for this service. The time involved and also the expense to the families in this area could certainly be helped if they could receive this treatment here. I hope this can be part of our new addition in the hospital. — Mrs. W.G.

A — "The cost of medical support personnel and the supplies to support the unit are much more critical than the cost of the machine," Don Feedback, Bothwell Hospital administrator, told Hot Line. "The space allocation is critical, too," he added.

Feedback explained that the kidney machines at Kansas City and the University of Missouri Medical Center are handled by specialists who deal with them on a fulltime basis. He noted that such a unit requires a permanent room and specially trained nurses as well as expensive supplies.

Feedback said that the money saved on travel by individuals might possibly have to go for higher service charges here since the volume of use would be lower. Feedback also revealed that all of the room in the new addition as well as the funds for new equipment have already been allocated. He added that medical experts consulted have advised that without greater resources on which to draw, hospital officials would be unwise to acquire such a unit.

Fleck elected to remainder of sheriff's term

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Democrat Jack Fleck was elected Tuesday to fill the unexpired term of H. C. "Sonny" Myers, who was ousted as Buchanan County sheriff by the Missouri Supreme Court.

Fleck, 32, a former St. Joseph police detective and investigator, easily defeated Republican John Southern for the right to serve the remaining 34 months of Myers' term.

Myers was ousted several weeks ago after a grand jury returned indictments against him naming 34 criminal counts. The charges, which included nepotism and fraud in office, were dropped following his ouster.

In other elections, incumbent St. Joseph Mayor William Bennett easily defeated two challengers in the Democratic mayoral primary.

Farm exports lead U.S. foreign trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm exports continue to provide the muscle for U.S. foreign trade, says the Agriculture Department.

In January farm exports were valued at more than $1.8 billion compared with agricultural imports of $787 million, the department said. The difference more than offset a deficit in export-import trade of nonfarm products, leaving a "surplus" of $182 million for the month, officials said.

By PETER WEAVER

Chances are you'll have a commercial or professional tax preparer do your returns this year. If you do, you'd better be careful.

"Internal Revenue Service and Federal Trade Commission investigators reveal that an alarmingly large proportion of tax return preparers are incompetent, dishonest or unethical." So says an eye-opening report made by the House Committee on Government Operations.

As taxpayers become confused or frustrated with complicated tax forms — both federal and local — they resort to getting help from paid "experts" who are supposed to know how to do the job. It's estimated that half the returns filed by the deadline next April 15, will be done by someone other than the taxpayer.

There are tax preparers who do an excellent job and probably save their clients considerable money in finding special deductions and other ways to ease the tax bite. But there are tax preparers who do little more than fill the spaces on your form and in some cases they don't even do that right. Avoid preparers who give no permanent address.

How do you find a good tax preparer? The same way you find a good pediatrician, dentist or tailor. By reputation and reference. Ask friends who have had good service from a tax preparer over the years. Or, ask your bank or savings and loan association.

There are basically two kinds of tax preparers — commercial and professional. The commercial preparers work through nationally franchised or local independent companies that do nothing else but fill out tax returns. Some stores, banks and other establishments also do commercial tax preparation through "computerized" services.

If you have your tax return prepared by a commercial outfit, don't just go to a firm —

Mind your money

Caution tax preparers

go to an individual in the firm who has been highly recommended. You'll pay anywhere from $5 for the simple 1040-A "short form" on up to $15 or even $30 for a fairly complicated 1040 "long form" which lists itemized deductions.

For taxpayers who feel they may have many deductions or who are going through some important change in their lives, such as divorce, retirement, selling or buying a home, renting out property or starting a small business, it might not be a bad idea to get in touch with the other type of tax preparer — the licensed professional.

These professionals are usually CPAs, enrolled agents

(approved by IRS) or tax attorneys. Their fees range from a minimum of $50 in some areas on up into the hundreds of dollars. They do much more than just fill out returns. They usually have you confess yourself economically so they can determine every possible deduction. Some also advise on how to word a will, draw up a trust, time the sale or purchase of property — all with an eye on saving money on future taxes.

You may only need a one-shot visit with a licensed professional to get your personal or family tax program straightened out. Ask how much your visit will cost and how you can save time and money by doing some of the groundwork yourself (compiling all the necessary figures and documents).

You can also get free tax preparation advice from IRS taxpayer service representatives. You can ask questions or they'll practically do the whole thing for you if you drop in for an interview. Your return has a page which lists toll-free numbers where these representatives can be reached.

At IRS offices you can get an excellent book, "Your Federal Income Tax," which sells for $1.00. It can help you uncover deductible expenses, such as storm damage and birth control pills, which you might have overlooked.

Nixon campaign reform request set for Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon plans to ask Congress Friday to enact a package of campaign reform proposals that would sharply limit individual contributions and prohibit direct donations to candidates by organized labor or business groups.

Nixon's recommendations, to be submitted in a special message, were outlined in advance Tuesday by a high White House official who said they reflect many hours of presidential work and represent "vintage Nixon."

The source, who declined to be quoted by name, said the proposals also would call for shortened presidential campaigns, federal laws against "dirty tricks," and legislation that would make it easier for public figures to sue when subjected to "slandering attacks."

Nixon's package will run head-on into strong congressional support for public financing of campaigns and over-all limits on campaign spending. The source said Nixon opposes public financing and believes spending curbs would be unfair and benefit incumbents.

Under Nixon's plan, each candidate in a federal election would finance his campaign through a single committee that would maintain but one bank account and make full disclosure of donations.

All contributions of $50 or more would have to be made by check, the source said.

Campaign committees would be barred from accepting more than $15,000 in contributions from one individual in a presidential race and $3,000 in Senate and House contests.

Organizations like the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education or such business groups as the Associated Milk Producers Inc. would be barred by law from contributing to any individual campaign. They could make donations to the national committees of major parties or to Senate and House campaign committees but would be barred from asking that their money be spent in any particular race or races.

The presidential campaign season would be abbreviated by legislating May 1 as the earliest date that a primary election would be held. The major parties would be asked to delay their national nominating conventions until September.

The official said tactics that would become federal offenses as improper campaign practices would include the misrepresentation of a candidate's voting record or the use of paid demonstrators to disrupt rallies.

He said Nixon would make it easier for public officials to sue for libel and slander on grounds this might encourage more Americans to seek public office.

Crowding for food

People began lining up before dawn Tuesday for the third distribution of free food which Randolph Hearst hopes will win his kidnapped daughter's release. This line was almost 250 persons strong at sunrise at a San Francisco distribution center. The Hearst-sponsored "People in Need" program was set up at the demand of the Symbionese Liberation Army which kidnapped Patricia Hearst more than a month ago.

Predict new constitution will curtail Selassie's authority

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopian observers predict the new constitution promised by Emperor Haile Selassie will drastically curtail the aged ruler's virtually unlimited authority.

"After 44 years as emperor, Haile Selassie is finally saying, 'I've had enough.' He is ready to become a ceremonial figure," one intellectual commented.

The frail, 81-year-old emperor will retain the royal trappings and near-worship of millions of peasants, but real power will shift to parliament, the cabinet and the courts, one top member of the civil service said.

With his country beset by drought, starvation, inflation, unrest and mounting demands for democratic government, the monarch announced Tuesday night that he had ordered a constitutional conference convened to draw up a new charter for the nation.

The emperor said the conference should clarify relations among the branches of government, streamline the courts, make the prime minister more responsible to parliament and guarantee civil rights. He said nothing about the formation of political parties, which the most vocal dissidents have demanded.

"It has always been our ardent wish that our beloved people should have a peaceful transition from one era to another," the emperor said in a five-minute radio and television address.

Haile Selassie said the new constitution should be completed in six months. But any changes appeared to be a year or more away since they must be approved by both houses of parliament at two separate sessions.

There was no immediate reaction from the military, whose mutiny for higher pay last week forced the government to resign, emboldened students, intellectuals and labor leaders in Addis Ababa demanding economic and political reforms, and severely eroded the emperor's power.

A general strike was still scheduled for Thursday by union leaders demanding a minimum wage, free schools and measures to increase employment.

Unemployment, inflation to remain high say economists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment and inflation will remain high and the economy will continue its sluggish pace even if the Arab oil embargo is lifted, administration economists say.

"I don't think it would raise our forecasts much," said Herbert Stein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. "I suppose it would remove some negative uncertainty."

"It wouldn't be much different than we anticipate now," Edgar Fiedler, the Treasury Department's chief economist, said. "The biggest effect was the initial impact of the embargo."

The economists made the statements in telephone interviews.

Authoritative U.S. sources said in Washington that they expect the Arab oil ministers to agree to lift the embargo when they meet in Libya Sunday.

Partly as a result of the cutoff and partly because of an already-slumping economy, the Nixon administration forecast that unemployment will rise to almost 6 per cent this year, throwing an additional one million people out of work, while the economy will grow by an anemic one per cent all year.

While the economy hovers near recession levels, the administration has predicted, the inflation rate will rocket upward by 7 per cent because of surging food and fuel prices.

If the embargo ends, Stein said, "It would take some time to get oil, and we don't know what they (the Arabs) will do about total production rates."

Arthur Okun, who served as economic adviser to former President Lyndon B. Johnson, said that lifting of the embargo wouldn't help Americans much if imported crude oil prices remain at high levels.

But if imported crude oil prices come down from $11 to perhaps $7 a barrel, as suggested by U.S. sources Tuesday, the impact on the U.S. economy would be positive, significant and important, Okun said.

Hearsts still waiting

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — The waiting continues for the family of kidnapped Patricia Hearst after completion of a third free food giveaway for 30,000 persons was marred by a hijacking.

News media reported that a truck carrying food for 4,000 persons was only a few minutes away from its Hunters Point distribution site in San Francisco Tuesday when it was stopped by gunmen. They threatened the driver and left with the rig.

The truck was found later, emptied of between $34,000 and $60,000 of meat, poultry and produce, according to reports.

Police said no complaint of the heist had been made and that orders from "high up" appeared to be out not to press the matter. Officials heading the food distribution would not confirm the theft.

As the massive food handout proceeded quietly at 12 centers, Gov. Ronald Reagan asked for prayers for the safe and quick return of the 20-year-old daughter of newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst.

"No one can fail to be moved by the anguish that this tragic situation has meant for Miss Hearst and her family," Reagan said in Sacramento.

FBI spokesmen in San Francisco consistently have said they don't know where Miss Hearst is being held. She was abducted 29 days ago, and a terrorist group calling itself the Symbionese Liberation Army claims it is holding her.

Law student killed in University City

UNIVERSITY CITY, Mo. (AP) — A third year law student at St. Louis University, William Wygant, was shot and killed Tuesday night on a city street in suburban University City, police reported.

Wygant, 23, was found on a city street shortly after 10 p.m. He had been shot in the face with a small caliber weapon and was pronounced dead at County Hospital.

The victim lived in University City but was originally from Ridgefield, Conn., police said.

Officers said they have ruled out robbery as a motive in the killing, since Wygant had $42 in his pockets when he was found.

New plan prepared for Russian trading

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has prepared a new plan in an attempt to overcome congressional opposition to granting special trade status to the Soviet Union because of restrictions on Russian Jews.

However, congressional sources hold out little prospect for the proposal, which U.S. officials say would give Congress a voice in granting Moscow credits and investment guarantees if a new trade bill extends Most Favored Nation (MFN) treatment to Russia.

According to one administration official, Congress could use any criteria it wanted, including the progress of Jewish emigration from Russia, in judging future commercial transactions.

At the same time, there was no direct link between official American policy and what the administration says is essentially a domestic Russian situation.

Congressional sources said the plan was no compromise at all and misses the point — the anti-MFN forces want a direct relationship between the trade bill and the treatment of Russia's Jews.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who feels passage of a trade bill containing special status for Moscow is essential to improving relations with the Soviet Union, is expected to explain the new plan at a meeting tonight with Sen. Henry A. Jackson, D-Wash., the leader of Senate opposition.

Sources say Jackson has no intention of compromising.

The Senate Finance Committee is holding hearings on the trade bill this week. The secretaries of the Treasury, Commerce, Labor and Agriculture are witnesses. Kissinger goes before the committee Thursday.

Polly's pointers

Streaked jeans are fashionable

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the rubber gloves most of us wear while doing household tasks. They come in different sizes but with fingers all the same length. My fingers are long and in a very short time I have punched holes in the ends of the fingers. Even two finger lengths — long and short — would be a great help. — A.L.P.

DEAR POLLY — I have a couple of ideas for Clara who is having trouble with the linings staying tacked on the inside of three handbags. If they have wood frames she might try using a heavy duty stapler and staple the lining to the frame. A tiny artist's brush could be used to paint the staples to match the lining.

If the frames will not take staples she could try a good glue. If the lining has an inside seam open it enough to slip a hand inside. Pull the lining out, put your hand inside and after applying glue to the fabric edge press against the frame. Do only a little bit at a time and allow to dry as you hold it in place. Push back, whip stitch the lining back together and push back down. Before proceeding try a bit of glue on an edge to be sure the fabric and glue are compatible. — L.F.

DEAR POLLY — To make use of those gold spoons that some thread comes on cut a small styrofoam ball in half, glue a flat side to the top of a spool, cover with velvet and have a pretty pincushion. A few sequins can be added for further decoration. — MRS. E.V.M.

DEAR POLLY — We have shag carpet in our bedrooms and the vacuum cannot get under the beds and heavy furniture with short legs. I dampen an old pillowcase, slip it on a yardstick and push it under the beds and furniture that cannot be moved each time I vacuum. This works like magic for picking up lint and dust from the carpet between thorough cleanings. Also I find it works great for removing dust from baseboards. — MRS. G.B.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — My daughter wore her new jeans out to play and got them all wet. When she got home she threw them in the dryer and when she took them out they were covered with stains. The next day when I started to dry more clothes I found lipstick in a little container that was all chewed up. I knew it had been through at least one drying cycle and had caused the stains on the jeans. I tried a stain remover that did not work so I'm confused and would like to know what to do next. — CHARLEEN.

DEAR CHARLEEN — Just the other day I saw a quite expensive denim pants suit that looked streaked all over. Perhaps if the stains cannot be removed your daughter could pass her jeans off as being streaked intentionally. — POLLY.

World is playground for airline brats

Fly boy

Creston Lee Creswell, 3, who's already outgrown his passport picture, displays the well-stamped document which has seen him through 11 round trips across the Atlantic with stops in Europe and the Middle East. By the time his passport expires in 1976 he'll be an old-timer of six who has seen it all.

"Put me off in Fort Worth."

It's different for his kids. "You talk about driving somewhere in a car for two hours and it's like going to jail," said Jacob. "When we are flying, they want to know if they are going in a 747. If it's a 747, they want to know if it has a piano bar. They'll ask what movie is playing. A 12-year-old kid is not supposed to ask what movie's on."

Some airlines are reluctant to discuss their employee passes, saying they don't want to stir up resentment from the public paying full fare. But others willingly publicize the system. They say it is a major advantage in recruiting new employees, although they are not hiring right now. They emphasize, however, that in most cases the pass riders were not taking seats from paying passengers.

Pass privileges vary from airline to airline and generally increase with seniority and position. For example, round-the-world economy class fare is about $1,600. The dependent of any Pan Am employee with three months' seniority can fly that route once a year for $320. Dependents of an employee of 10 years can fly the route any number of times for a $30 service charge.

Dependents of staff vice presidents — such as Donald Creswell — and other high level officers have unlimited free trips regardless of seniority. Most dependents lose their passes when they are 21 or no longer dependent on their parents.

Frank Brzowski is a junior at Regis College in Denver. He says his travel does not distract from his studies, and reduces the cost of his social life.

"It's cheaper to go to Milan than to take a girl out to dinner in Denver," said Brzowski, whose father works for TWA in Jetta, Saudi Arabia. Last year, he went to see a ballet in Milan with Paige Gayuski, a schoolmate whose father also is a TWA employee.

This year Miss Gayuski transferred to Boston College but her travels were curtailed by the 45-day TWA strike. Generally passes are honored by any airline for a small fee, but not if the issuing carrier is on strike.

"I called the airline every three days. I was like a junkie without a fix," said Miss Gayuski. "The minute the strike was over I went to the airport. I almost kissed the floor I was so happy."

Once Miss Gayuski and her brother flew into Kennedy Airport to meet another brother. They arrived early but had no money so they got on a plane and flew to Chicago and back, having lunch going out and dinner coming back.

Because of recent flight cutbacks, caused in part by the energy crisis, Miss Gayuski was afraid that such extra-needs flying would no longer be possible. So far, however, she has had no trouble getting flights.

"There's always one seat," she said.

The luxuries of pass flying are not automatic, however. If there are not enough meals on board, the pass rider does without. Most of the time it is impossible to have reserved seats. It's not unusual for a pass rider to go to the airport planning to go to Jamaica and end up in Bermuda because it's the only available flight. Luggage must be carried on because a pass rider may be bumped at the last minute, surrendering his seat to a paying customer.

Parents and children worry about the long range effects of the system.

Brzowski, among others, said he sometimes has difficulty relating to contemporaries who haven't traveled and he is worried about cutting the umbilical cord, not with his family, but with his travel pass.

"I don't know what I'd do without my magic card," he said.

David Pomerence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Pomerence, has been selected by the sophomore class of Sweet Springs R-7 High School to represent them at the annual Sophomore Pilgrimage, sponsored by the MFWC Fortnightly Club, Sweet Springs. Davis is vice-president of his class.

Agency gets high rating

The Missouri Valley Human Resource Development Corp. ranked high among the 18 state Community Action Agencies, in terms of the number of persons served by several of its programs, it was reported recently.

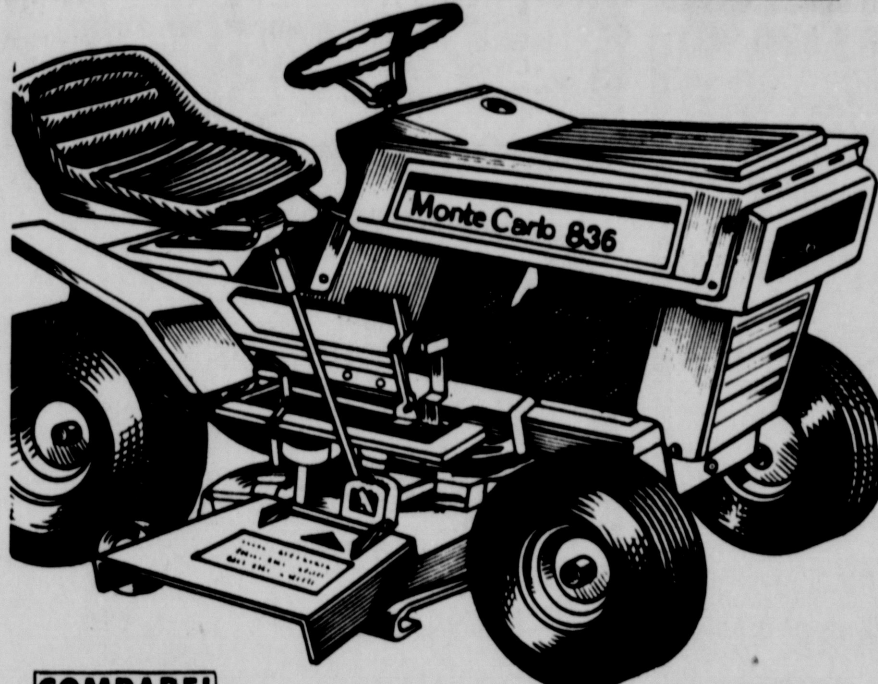

According to figures released by a St. Louis University research team, the MVHRDC, which has Manpower and Youth Development offices in Sedalia, ranked first in the number of participants (294) in its Foster Grandparents program. It placed third in the number of persons served by its Neighborhood Youth Corps (1,257 enrollees), Manpower (2,267 enrollees) and youth program (123 enrollees).

In the NYC and Manpower categories, the MVHRDC, while placing third overall, was ranked first among out-state agencies which exclude St. Louis and Kansas City.

By DEE WEDEMEYER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Creston Lee Creswell has made 11 round trips across the Atlantic and finally has concluded that the world's best hot chocolate is served at the Eiffel Tower. Let others dream of Paris and love or Paris and the Louvre, Creston Lee Creswell thinks of cocoa and warm milk.

But then he has a special viewpoint. He is only 3 years old. And he's also an airline brat, a child of one of the nation's 300,000 airline employees. Like their parents, they fly for free or with huge discounts and they grow up with an unusual perspective on travel.

For these junior jetsetters, a 747 is as familiar as the school bus. First class accommodation is routine. A trip to London may cost them less than other kids pay for a Saturday movie. In fact, some airline kids have taken a plane just to see the movie, having first circumvented the cost of the movie charge by bringing their own earphones. Others take a flight when they need a free meal or are tired of dormitory cooking. The world is literally their playground.

In the more than 117,000 miles young Creston has logged, he has played with Spanish-speaking children in a Barcelona park and ridden on the carousel at Fortnum and Mason, the London department store. He has been in the Prado, where a Goya nude immediately caught his eye: "That woman has no clothes on," he exclaimed.

His parents, Terri and Donald C. Creswell — he's vice president of cargo sales for Pan American World Airways — have pasted a postcard of the painting in Creston's scrapbook for when he is older and more appreciative of fine arts.

"The boom for kids has come with jet," says Jerry Jacob, a vice president of American Airlines who has watched his three children become increasingly blasé about travel.

Jacob himself was a pioneer airline brat. His father worked for American Airlines and Jacob remembers as a child flying from New York to Texas to visit his grandmother. The journey meant six stops in a DC-3. His mother would pin $1 inside his coat and give him a note for the stewardess, saying,

Farm roundup

Grain prices above target levels prescribed by federal law

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Farming costs have risen so much that many authorities think it would be ruinous if grain prices were allowed to fall to target levels prescribed by federal law.

The Agriculture Department says cash market prices for wheat and corn for 1974 production are expected to be higher than the target prices set by Congress in the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973.

But if record grain crops materialize this year as USDA experts predict, some buildup of grain reserves — and lower prices — can be expected.

The new law puts into effect the target price concept of price guarantee for four years, beginning with 1974 crops and extending through 1977 harvests.

Under the law, target prices are specified for the first two years, including $2.05 per bushel for wheat and $1.38 for corn. The law provides that, if cash market prices fall below the target prices during a portion of the marketing year, the government will make up the difference by making cash payments to farmers for their share of production needed to meet U.S. and export requirements.

Currently, as they have been for some time, market prices for grain are much higher than the targets. The department last week, for example, said Feb. 15 prices for wheat at the farm averaged a record $5.52 per bushel and corn a high of $2.76 per bushel.

Although the law set the targets specifically for the first two years of its four-year authority, it allowed the target prices to be adjusted for 1976 and 1977 according to farm costs.

Bills have been introduced in Congress to make the escalator provision apply immediately so farmers will have the added guarantee of higher target supports in 1974 and 1975 as well.

Don Paarlberg, director of economics for USDA, says wheat historically is the one crop with a reputation for rebounding from scarcity to surplus with relative ease. Although in short supply now, Paarlberg says, "it's a distinct possibility" that by 1975 or 1976 the world will be in a surplus wheat situation.

What would be the price situation if that happened? Would wheat plummet to target price levels or below, meaning that huge government payments once again would burden U.S. taxpayers?

"I don't think it's going to target prices," Paarlberg told a reporter. "I think the whole level of price for all farm products has been escalated as the result of worldwide inflation."

"And I think farmers would be in a hell of a price-cost squeeze long before the price dropped back to the target level," Paarlberg said. "Their costs have gone up sharply, and those costs don't come down like prices they receive come down."

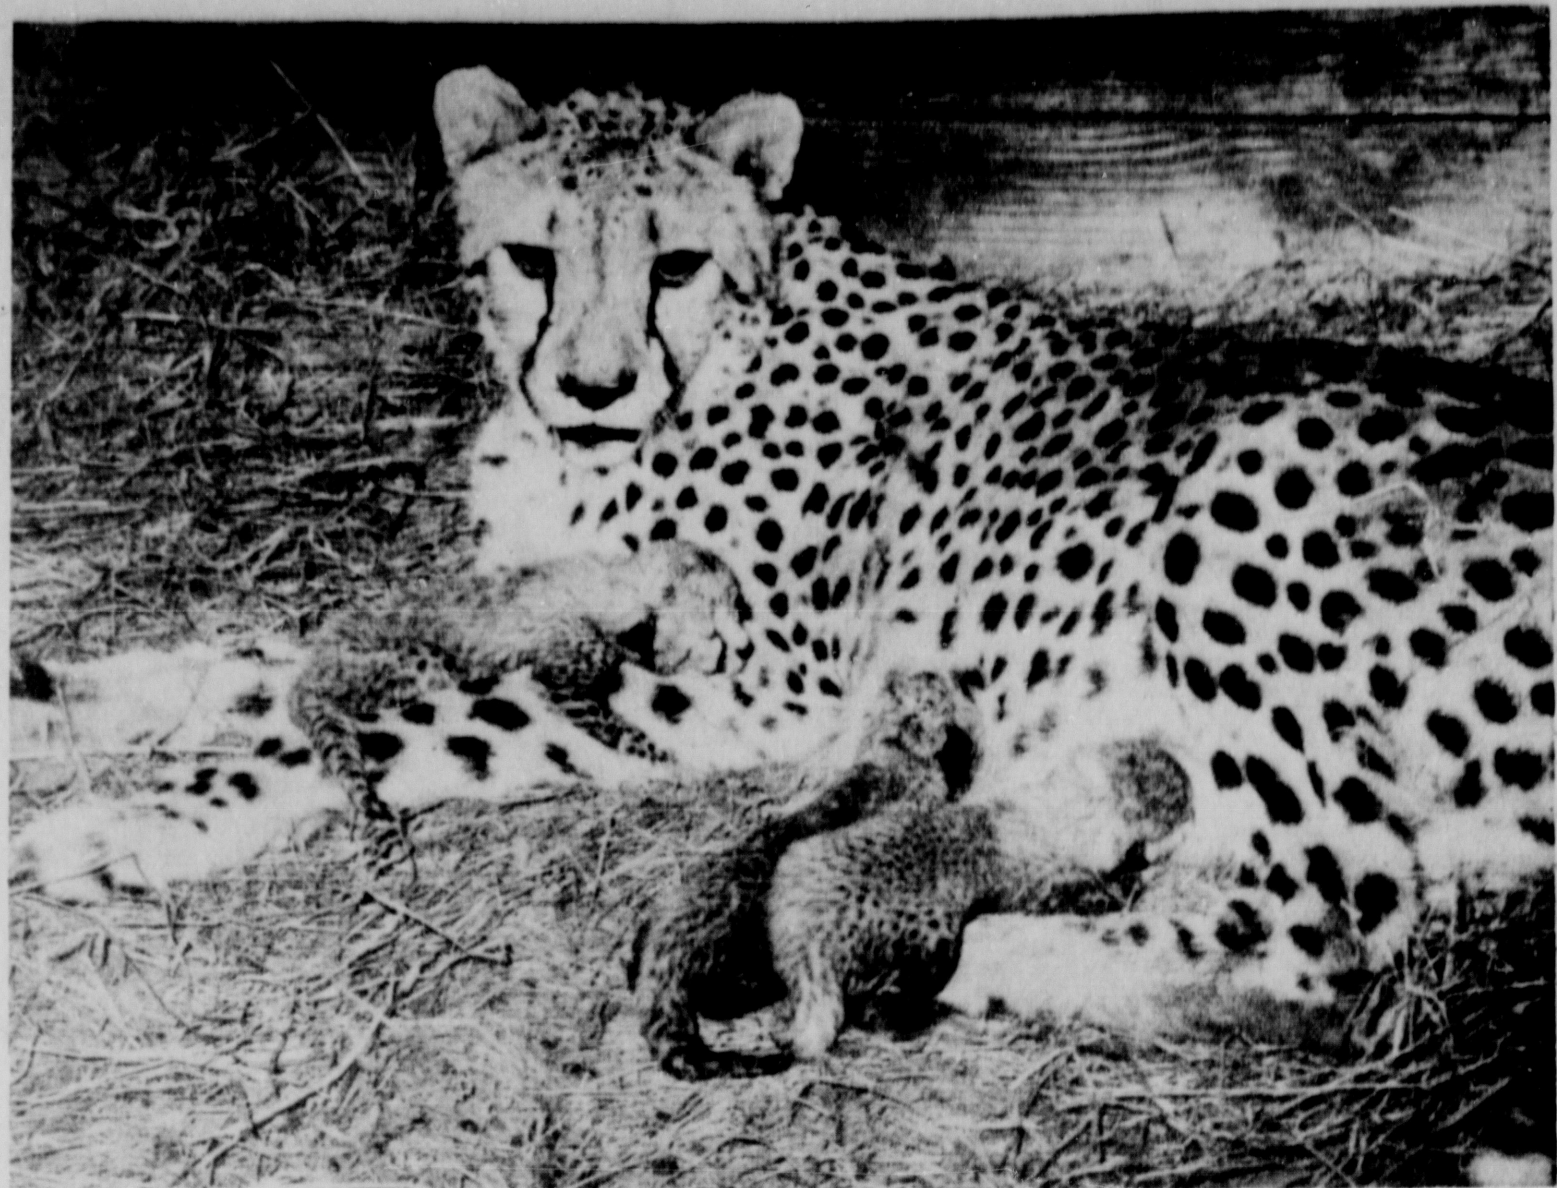

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although milk prices paid farmers rose again in February, their feed costs rose even more sharply, according to Agriculture Department analysts.

The milk-feed ratio was 1.469 on Feb. 15, down from 1.48 in January and 1.54 a year earlier, the department said. The figures represent the pounds of feed equal in value to one pound of milk sold by dairy farmers.

Prices of all types of milk averaged $8.95 per 100 pounds last month, up from $8.89 in January and $6.56 in February 1973. But dairy rations averaged $6.12 per 100 pounds, up from $6 in January and $4.25 a year earlier.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is providing West Germany with a larger share of its cotton imports, second only to Turkey, says the Agriculture Department.

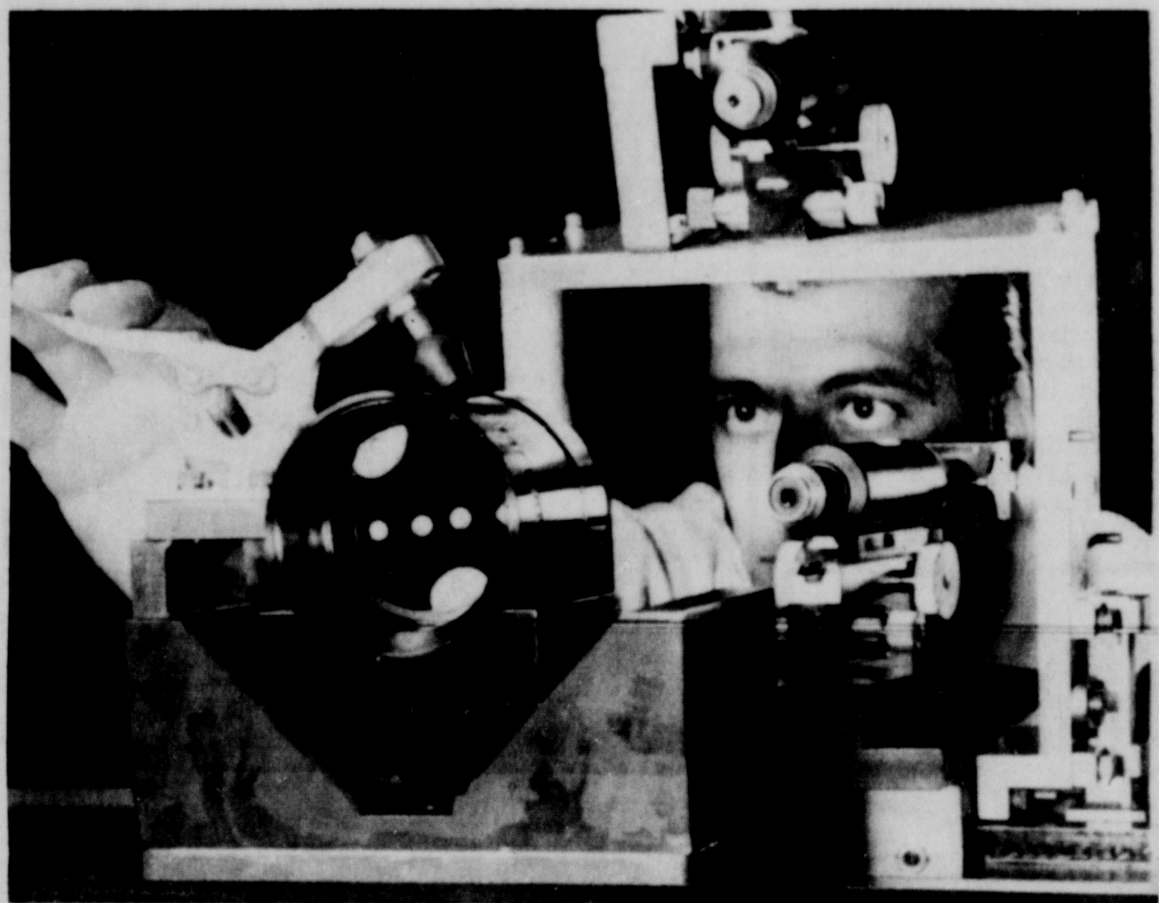

In 1972-73, Germany imported about 1.2 million bales from all sources, including 187,000 bales, or 16 per cent, from the United States. That was double the U.S. share in the preceding year, the Foreign Agricultural Service said Monday in a report.

Committee approves increased funding of school districts

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — After some intra-committee maneuvering, the House Economics Committee approved Monday night a measure to increase funding for most school districts in the state.

The committee also killed measures to increase salaries of state judges and provide compensation for victims of crime.

A number of committee members changed votes after Rep. Richard DeCoster, D-Canton, questioned how they would have voted if members of the press had not been present.

The measure ties state aid to public schools to the statewide average cost per student. About 40 of the 570 school districts in Missouri would lose money, however the rest would gain. Its cost has been estimated at $40-$70 million.

It would hike the minimum guaranteed payment to schools for each student attending from the current $400 to an estimated $924.

The bill would take effect in the 1975-76 school year. The committee vote to approve it was 8-5.

Rep. Corley Thompson Jr., R-Webster Groves, described approving the bill as "really absurd," since the state, he said, does not have the necessary funds to pay for increased costs.

Committee chairman Stan Thomas, D-Liberty, sent for Rep. Robert Ellis Young, R-Carthage, who had previously left his votes on the bills with the committee.

Thompson protested Young's action, saying it was improper to allow votes to be recorded when the committee member was not present.

After passage of the bill, Thompson said, "This is really ridiculous to even have the committee."

"We have failed to kill one bill in the whole history of this committee," Thompson protested.

The committee then killed, at least tentatively, the crime compensation and pay raise bills.

Committee chairman Thomas said it was possible the bills would be reconsidered by the committee. They have previously received first-round approval in the House, and are favored by the House Democratic leadership.

The salary increase bill would have authorized increases for a number of the state's judges, including Supreme Court, circuit court and courts of appeal justices.

Its estimated cost for the first full year of operation was $1.3 million. The vote to kill the measure was 7-6.

The Crime Compensation Bill would have established a state board to oversee the distribution of compensation to crime victims and was estimated to cost almost $1 million during the first full year in effect.

The bill specifies a number of offenses for which victims could be compensated. The vote to kill it was 8-5.

Both defeated measures were sponsored by Rep. Kenneth J. Rothman, D-Clayton, the House majority leader.

Many experts believe wheat shortage is temporary

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is short of wheat. Prices have nearly quadrupled since 1972. But huge harvests in the next two to four years could bring the country back to an old problem: Wheat surpluses and depressed market prices.

The key is exports. Will they hold up? The Nixon administration is committed to a policy of "all-out wheat harvests," as one official put it. But export outlets are needed to justify those harvests.

The United States has consumed only 770 million bushels of wheat in recent years. That's roughly one-third of the record 2.1 billion bushel harvest government experts predict for 1974. The remaining two-thirds already have been sold — even oversold — abroad. The two major customers, China and Russia, have purchased 150 million and 100 million bushels, respectively, for 1974 delivery.

Don Paarlberg, director of economics at the U.S. Agriculture Department, doesn't think wheat exports will be as good in 1975.

"There is every reason for thinking that wheat will again become abundant in the world, probably in the summer of 1974," Paarlberg said.

Export earnings last year were $2.4 billion from 1.184 billion bushels of wheat. The entire crop of 1.7 billion bushels was worth a record $6.5 billion, more than double the old high of $3.1 billion 26 years ago.

Yet wheat farmers fret, as if prosperity is about to slip from them.

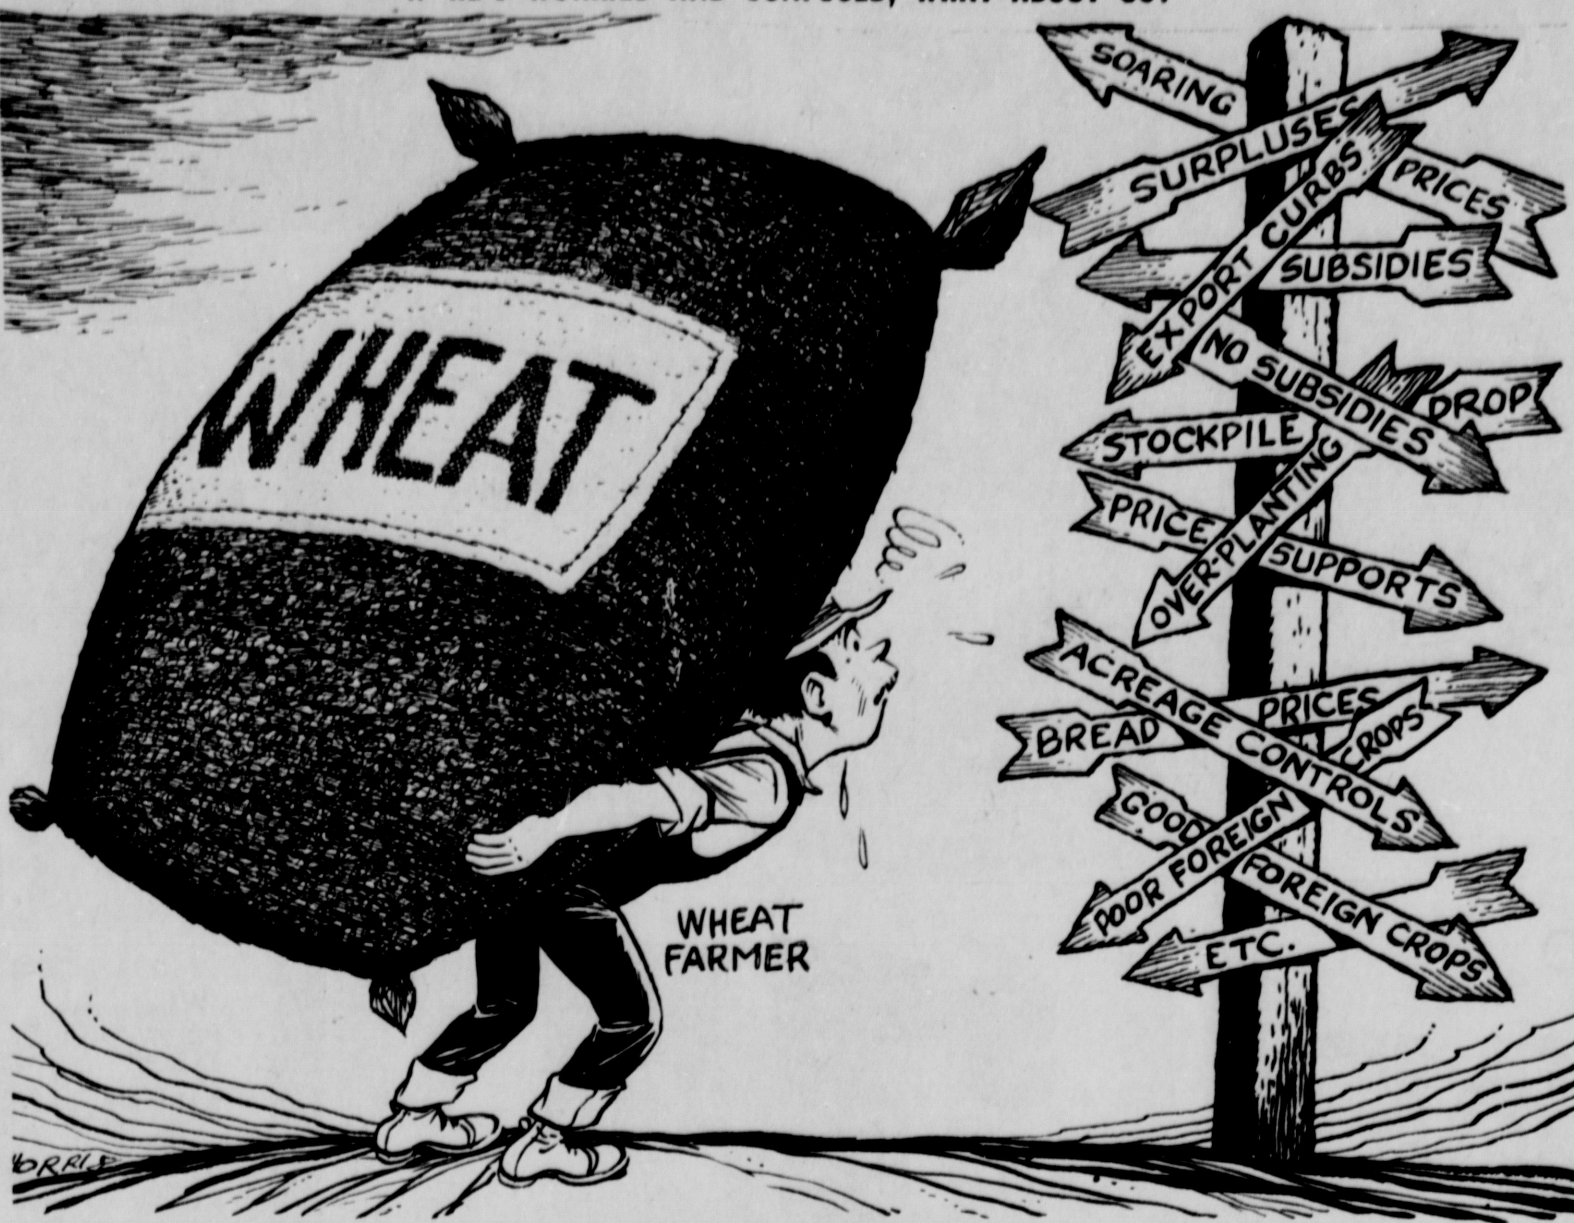

"There is apprehension," said Rep. Keith G. Sebelius, R-Kan., who claims that his congressional district grows more wheat than any other in the United States. "Farmers fear overplanting will hurt them further down the road. That feeling is strong among the better producers and their organizations."

Sebelius said some of his constituents haven't planted as much wheat this year as they could have, despite the lucrative prices.

Only two years ago, there was too much wheat, or so everyone thought. Prices at the farm were at subsistence level, and the federal government was distributing to farmers nearly $1 billion a year in wheat subsidies. One acre of wheat in early July 1972 sold for $40 at the free market price. Last year, the same acre brought $150.

One bushel of wheat, enough to make 70 loaves of bread, sold at the farm for $1.30 in mid-1972. By this January it was a record $5.29 a bushel. Because of the high market price, the government has not had to pay subsidies in recent months, and probably won't have to pay any in 1974, most experts predict.

The sale of more than 400 million bushels of wheat to the Soviet Union two summers ago set off the increase in prices. There have been published reports that a loaf of bread will cost $1 this spring, and that overselling abroad will leave the United States temporarily short of wheat this year. President Nixon has suspended import quotas on wheat and flour, in case of need.

IF HE'S WORRIED AND CONFUSED, WHAT ABOUT US?

Last fall, the Agriculture Department canceled land-idling requirements for 1974 production of major crops, including wheat, to replenish dwindling reserves. Winter wheat farmers, who plant in the fall and harvest the following summer, increased acreage nearly 20 per cent.

The greater production is part of the fear that wheat surpluses will exist in 1975, bringing down market prices. Until the Russian wheat deal, exports seldom exceeded 50 per cent of production and domestic consumption usually was less than 40 per cent.

When exports were slim, as they were in the '60s, the price of wheat was near or below the government's "price support" loan rate, a guarantee of a minimum price under U.S. farm law.

Farmers who opted for price support loans put up their wheat as collateral. Frequently they let the government keep the wheat rather than repay the loans.

That is how, basically, the government became the owner of huge wheat surpluses in the late 1950s and early 1960s. In 1961, for example, the Commodity Credit Corporation in the Agriculture Department owned 1.24 billion bushels. That was one-half the world's grain reserves.

Warehouse operators prospered by storing wheat at taxpayer expense. Those payments averaged $1 million a day during the billion-bushel surplus years.

Tighter acreage control and a different method of price supports, including direct payments to farmers for taking land out of production, helped to reduce the old stockpile by the mid-1960s.

But fear of a world grain shortage prompted a big increase in U.S. wheat acreage in 1967. A total of 68.2 million acres was planted. By comparison, this year's wheat acreage is expected to total 70 million.

Not all the demand envisioned seven years ago materialized and the wheat inventory rose from 425 million bushels on July 1, 1967, to 819 million bushels two years later.

By July 1, 1972, the surplus was 863 million bushels and was growing daily.

Then a poor harvest in Russia and in many other countries changed everything. Starting with the Russian wheat deal, exports jumped. So did market prices, while the U.S. reserve declined to 438 million bushels on July 1, 1973. By this July, the reserve is expected to be only 200 million bushels, and perhaps zero if all export contracts are fulfilled.

Ninety countries have ordered U.S. wheat this year.

Nevertheless, Agriculture Department officials say this year's expected harvest of 2.1 billion bushels will be enough to meet domestic demand and exports. By mid-1975, the officials say, the U.S. wheat reserve will begin to grow.

Democrats in Congress from farm states disagree.

"What it all comes down to is that our fate is totally in the hands of Mother Nature," says Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn. "Even a minor trick on her part could move us from a tight market situation into chaos and disaster for American consumers and our trading partners throughout the world."

Sen. Milton R. Young, R-N.D., is not so worried about the current wheat crunch as he is about surpluses and prices in the future. The 1973 farm law, which set up a new "target price" method of assuring farmers a price for wheat, feed grain and cotton, needs to be amended, he says.

The target price for 1974 and 1975 is $2.05 per bushel.

Under the law, farmers will get government payments to make up the difference if market prices fall below $2.05 a bushel during 1976 and 1977, the two final years of the act. The target price will be adjusted according to changes in farm production costs.

Young wants the cost escalator to go into effect now. Based on current costs, the wheat target for 1974 would be $2.40 per bushel instead of $2.05, under Young's plan. It would rise to $2.81 in 1975, $3.29 in 1976, and $3.85 in 1977, if farm costs do not increase.

"Farmers are frustrated," Young said in an interview. "They don't know whether wheat is going to $10 per bushel or down to the target price of $2.05. They are worried about expenses and what the price of wheat may be next year."

"They know they'd go broke if wheat went back to July 1972," he said. "There's more possibility for producing surpluses of wheat than for any other crop."

Exports of all farm products in 1973 totaled a record $17.7 billion, nearly double those of 1972, and helped push the U.S. trade balance to a surplus for the first time in three years. Wheat, feed grains and soybeans led the way.

Part of the gain was a result of devaluations of the U.S. dollar, making American farm products cheaper for many countries, but also — particularly in the case of wheat — because some nations began stockpiling as a hedge against shrinking supplies.

Now, some observers believe, larger harvests abroad will return wheat trade to near normalcy in a year or two as Canada, Australia, Argentina and Europe move back into their historic roles as competitors with the United States.

Lesson for U.S. in British election

WASHINGTON — Great Britain was in the depths of economic pathos. Her people were bereft of the brave spirit that carried them through the agonies of a gruesome war in those twilight years of empire when Britain was truly Great.

Rowan

And Prime Minister Edward Heath was honest enough with himself to admit that things were going to get worse before the mandatory date for new elections. So he called for immediate elections, believing the polls that suggested his Conservative party could salvage a new mandate.

It turned out to be the demise of Heath as prime minister, and perhaps continued chaos for Britain. But the critical thing is that in a time of despair the people of Britain were given a chance to work their will, to gamble on new leadership.

There is a grim parallel for us Americans.

The United States is wallowing in economic miseries, social conflict and political despair. As in Britain, the situation is bound to worsen. But we have no provisions that allow for sudden new elections, for giving our people a chance either to bestow a new vote of confidence on the administration, or throw it out.

We have a laborious, complicated, divisive impeachment proceeding which would serve only to throw out the leader while leaving in power his party and his ideological partisans. While the odds are good that the House of Representatives will vote to impeach, or indict, Mr. Nixon, the chances are much slimmer that two-thirds of the Senate will vote to oust him.

There is something disquieting about the relative ease with which Britons could get rid of Heath — who looks as saintly as Rosanne of Charing Cross when compared to our scandal-plagued President — while we flounder in confusion and conflict.

It is sobering — no, frightening — to just ponder the scorecard of people linked closely to Mr. Nixon who are in jail or in danger of going there. Yet, the man who hired them and directed them may use the Constitution as a shield to the extent that he goes unpunished in any meaningful way.

Never in the almost-200-year history of this nation has there been anything like it. Dozens of people disgraced, scandalized, jailed, ruined — and the nation's leader standing in muck up to his eyeballs claiming that he didn't know what was going on and that he isn't going to resign.

The nation has never been in such need of swift machinery for giving the American voters another chance, for turning to new leadership.

The guilty pleas already received leave no doubt that Mr. Nixon and his top aides have brought this country and its government into disrepute. The new Watergate indictments only add to the evidence that Mr. Nixon has failed to uphold his oath of office and that his administration has defiled the Constitution.

If all this is not grounds for impeachment, for giving Americans new leadership, then the nation is hopeless.

Strategy of saving
on energyBy RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

This reporter sat in the other day on meetings of an advisory committee for President Nixon's independence-in-energy-by 1980 program. It was an eye opener.

Cromley

For one thing, it was made clear that if the Arabs lift their embargo immediately and begin shipping in April at the pre-embargo rate, the United States will still be 8 per cent short of fuel.

For another, no one at the meeting talked about independence in six years. The publicly proclaimed year — 1980 — is a slogan, not a reality.

The date used in these conferences was 1985, more than a decade hence.

Even for 1985, the advisers were not talking of independence. The best they hoped for was that by 1985 the United States would be increasing production and energy-saving measures at a pace great enough to convince the Arab states and other oil-rich countries this nation could hold its own in any future embargo and that the West, with American help, would be in a position to get by without a collapse. The hope thus is that the Arabs would think three times before again starting a boycott or leapfrogging prices out of sight.

Finally, the President's energy plan as outlined is based on guestimates so hazy the officials who produced the figures and outlined the forecasts at times apologized profusely for pulling data almost out of thin air.

Even so, the revised plan doesn't call for the huge energy increases popularly imagined.

Of the total improvement in the supply-demand balance hoped for, equivalent to 16 million barrels a day of petroleum by 1985, almost half — seven million barrels — is to be achieved through conservation. That is, by holding down the use of oil and other forms of energy through the widespread adoption of energy-saving devices and practices.

This predicted saving is admittedly a wild guess and was, in fact, arrived at by taking the total normal energy demand predicted for 1985 and arbitrarily assuming 12 per cent could be saved.

One administration man expressed the mathematics in other terms. The goal, he said, is to cut the annual energy consumption growth rate from the present 5 per cent to 3.5 per cent.

The other nine million barrel daily gain by 1985 would be achieved by production increases. More than half of this — five million barrels — would be accounted for by the Alaskan pipeline.

The equivalent of some 2.5 million barrels would be made available by increases in coal production and by coal conversion.

Added nuclear plants would account for a gain of only 600,000 barrels a day of oil equivalent, and hydroelectric, solar and geothermal development for 800,000 barrels.

As seen from the above figures, what we are talking about for 1985 is primarily a downhill on consumption plus a major boost from Alaska's North Slope. The other boosts — from coal, oil shale, solar energy, geothermal power and nuclear stations — are going to move ahead slowly.

To encourage the conservation administration plan calls for, William Simon's Federal Energy Office is studying four possible levies — an increased tax on gasoline, on crude oil, on all energy sources and on excessive residential energy use.

There are hundreds of energy-saving techniques and devices at hand. Many are already being used successfully here and abroad to increase industrial output with less cost in fuel. But Simon's office, while paying strong lip service to this concept, apparently has no effective concrete plans for pushing conservation through increased efficiency.

Instead, the indications are, the energy office is concentrating on meeting much of the energy shortage by cutbacks and rationing, if needed. One insider calls it an obsession with "gentlemanly sacrifices."

The parking issue

City employees who work in the Municipal Building have lost their free-parking privileges, which Mayor Jerry Jones dispensed without approval by the City Council. But the problem remains.

At Monday night's City Council meeting, the mayor announced that the 22 city employees who had been given free parking permits had either purchased them or turned them back in. The city counselor had determined that the practice is prohibited by the ordinance covering the parking meter bonds.

Employees who worked in the old city hall parked in spaces that did not have meters. New city officials who could not get a space were given free parking permits by the City Council.

With the construction of the new Municipal Building, however, the unmetered parking spaces were eaten up, and city workers were forced onto the streets.

It seems unfair to now require such employees to pay their own parking expenses after many years of being allowed to park free. The City Council should come up with some method of eliminating this expense, or compensating employees for it.

And now, the streaker

Major advances in the nation's cultural and social life eventually work their way inland from the coasts, finally reaching Missouri.

Like streaking.

Streaking, in case you haven't heard, is the practice of college students, mostly male, running across campus naked. Streaking started in the Ivy League schools a few months back, and is now sweeping the country.

The University of Missouri-

Columbia recorded its second streaking incident Monday afternoon, when two nude men made a dash across campus during a class break. This would seem to be a Midwest innovation; originally streakers tended to limit their activities to the nocturnal hours.

If a streaker is recognized, or worse yet, caught, he faces only ignominy. And the Columbia police department has let it be known that it will arrest all streakers it gets its hands on — even barely.

WASHINGTON — The Watergate prosecutors have been investigating, of all groups, the American Legion on suspicion that the White House used legionnaires to stand up to left-wing demonstrators.

To the bewilderment of National Adjutant William Hauck, who has been a determinedly nonpartisan friend of presidents since 1952, he was called in for interrogation by the prosecutors.

Hauck duly appeared before a stern, young lawyer named Nick Ackerman who, ironically, won the American Legion "Voice of Democracy" award at high school in 1965. Ackerman wanted to know whether the White House had tried to get the legion to bus in members for the funeral of J. Edgar Hoover.

The prosecutors apparently thought the White House tried to recruit legionnaires to square off with left-wing demonstrators at the funeral, thereby stirring up sentiment against President Nixon's enemies on the left. It's known that the Cuban Watergate burglary team was sent to squabble with the demonstrators.

The long-suffering Hauck was also interrogated about the legion's history and its stand on the Pentagon Papers case. He was even questioned, astonishingly, about the White House tapes.

Hauck confided to us that he was "dumbfounded" at the questioning. Nevertheless, he patiently denied that the White House had contacted the legion about the Hoover funeral or meddled in legion policies.

He also checked with other top legionnaires and wrote a private letter to Ackerman, stating they also had received no call "urging the influx of busloads of American Legionnaires to attend Mr. Hoover's funeral."

At the Watergate special prosecutor's office, a spokesman said it was "absolutely wrong" to say the legion was under investigation. "We have asked many patriotic Americans to cooperate with us and regret very much that anyone would assume this meant we were investigating them," said the spokesman.

The spokesman's definition of investigation differs with the dictionary definition and the impression left on the legion.

BATTLE FOR BURMA: Tough Chinese Communist guerrillas are attacking settlements in remote mountains of neutralist Burma.

As described by intelligence reports from the battle zone, the Chinese are led by officers in close touch with Peking.

Their thrusts into the hills and towns of Northern Burma threaten not only Burma but Thailand, which has close military ties with the United States. There are no reports, however, that American Special Forces in Thailand have intervened in the spreading conflict.

The transcript of an unusual Morse radio transmission from the northern Shan states of Burma tells of powerful Communist action against Shan opium armies and troops of the "KMT (Taiwan)," a Chinese Kuomintang force in Burma.

Relayed by Shan rebel army transmitters, the message says: "CPB (Communist Party, Burma) attack KMT (Taiwan) in Mong Sang on Jan. 21, 1974, 0500 hours ... 15 KMT killed and many wounded." The message claims many weapons were seized by the Communists.

A second message reports: "CPB occupied Mong Sang ... Shan United Army (a rebel anti-Communist group) and KMT (Taiwan) retreated." More clashes between the Communists and the Shan armies have been reported in the wireless transmissions of Hpa Heing, Chiang Lian, Om Tung, Kat Lof and Wan Ho Nar.

From other intelligence sources, we have learned that the Communists now threaten the Burmese district capital of Keng Tung and may control the only road connecting it with the rest of Burma.

Another message claims that the Chinese guerrillas probably hold "most of the area between the Nam Pang river and the Salween area" — a huge track of misty mountains and deep gorges in Northern Burma.

Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., chairman of the House International Narcotics subcommittee, has established contacts with the Shan army to keep abreast of the opium trade. He has learned that the Chinese military moves may jeopardize his efforts to free two Russian doctors, who were kidnapped by Shan rebels from a Soviet mercy mission to Burma.

The Russians have secretly asked Wolff's help in getting the doctors back. To Wolff's astonishment, he was called from a sick bed to meet with a Soviet diplomat on the matter. Wolff promised to do what he could.

Tax windfall
for Missouri

Missouri income tax forms are now tailored to federal guidelines for deductions. The following are a few of the previously deductible items that are no longer allowed: cigarette tax, car license plates, truck license plates, cycle license plates, driver's license, chauffeur's license, city sticker for vehicles, vehicle inspection fees, tax on out-of-state phone calls and federal excise tax on phone calls.

I hope the windfall to Missouri from its taxpayers isn't used to buy liquor, or increase pay and retirement benefits for our thoughtful officials.

"Do you think God would consider a little plea bargaining?"

Energy crisis inspires inventors to suggest new devices

By TOM TIEDE
WASHINGTON (NEA) — At this moment people everywhere are devising whatchamacallits, or fashioning whatchamacallits, and even building doodadicks which may help solve the energy crisis.

The question is, what are they to do with their whatchamacallits? Many of them are sending their plans via post to the Federal Energy Office. Spokeswoman Marion Olson says that agency is receiving up to 2,000 letters a day from citizens who are certain theirs is the idea or the gadget that will keep the nation humming.

Some of the inspirations, of course, are purely fuelish. One fellow says he can dry buffalo chips which will burn for hours. Another wants to put governors on thermostats, forcing them to remain at 60 degrees, "that way even 68 will seem warm after awhile." A third lady modestly suggests that "everyone should go to the bathroom in the dark — leave the door slightly ajar, especially when there is no one else in the house."

But other recommendations and inventions are more thoughtful. Mrs. Olson says that a company in Texas has reported its new method for recovering secondary oil. Another man says he's discovered a blend of hydrogen and water which can replace hydraulic fluid. A fellow in Virginia has written to advise of his thought to use coal for lawn mowers. And then there is the chap who insists he can use the laser beam principle to create limitless steam.

Yet whatever the worth of the individual suggestions, most of them, even the good ones, seem destined for oblivion. Mrs. Olson says the FEO does what it can with the offerings: "We try to send them out to the appropriate agencies; if it's a carburetor idea, for example, we send it to the Department of Transportation." However, she admits this is often more bureaucratic flim flam. A DOT spokesman, for instance, says when he gets ideas from the public concerning energy he sends them to the FEO.

The truth is the government of 213 million people simply does not have an efficient system for investigating the visionary contributions of that mass. Letters to federal agencies are received almost as nuisances — "You should read some of these dumb things," says an FEO worker whose job it is to read them. The letters are politely answered, but no encouragement is usually given. Says Mrs. Olson: "We send them a form reply."

Nor is there much encouragement from the one governmental agency that is set up to handle citizen ideas. The stodgy U.S. Patent Office operates so cumbersome a system that applications are best handled by attorneys and the average time of acceptance or rejection is 23 months. Its spokesman, Isaac Fleichman, is a firm believer in the wonderful inventiveness of the common man — "21 per cent of the 1,500 patents granted daily are to individuals" — yet he admits the patent road is on an uphill climb:

"We don't give patents for ideas. We have to have a carefully detailed and thoroughly researched package. Also, we aren't a marketing organization. All we do is advise a man if he has a unique concept — it's up to him to find somebody to buy it."

So even if a concept is recognized there is no assurance the world will find a use for it. Thus it is that big industry does not always appreciate citizen inventiveness, and often thoroughly discourages it.

A New York State environmentalist, for example, has recently built and tested a better mousetrap for catching noxious emissions in the standard automobile. Dr. William Balgord has equipped a 1972 car with a dual-bed catalyst system which he claims, after 25,000 miles of driving, meets 1976 emission controls and also saves 20 to 40 per cent in fuel consumption. Ye auto companies which have examined the gadget have rejected it and so it is likely his idea will go the way of so many others: nowhere.

And that's a shame. The Patent Office's Fleichman believes that given the chance, the fertile imaginations of Americans can solve almost any problem. He says the Patent Office, for one, is beginning to recognize this as concerns the energy crisis and is currently giving priority handling (applicants will be processed in eight months rather than 23) to energy-oriented inventors. The rest of government would do well to follow suit. What is needed is a federal clearing house, a U.S. suggestion box.

For as Mrs. Olson of the FEO puts it: "I believe if we took all the suggestions that come in, and acted on them, the government could get rid of all the people it hires to come up with such ideas." (NEA)

Finley, Stax solve problems

MEMPHIS (AP) — Differences between Stax Record Co. and Charles O. Finley on the purchase of the Memphis Tams of the American Basketball Association have been resolved, the Memphis music firm reported Tuesday.

Stax has not concluded purchase of the club, but expects to later this week, Larry Shaw, a Stax vice president, told a news conference.

Shaw did not say what matters were yet outstanding.

He said Finley and Stax, a black-oriented firm that is the nation's largest soul music recording company, had reached agreement on a purchase price. He did not reveal the figure. Finley, who has held the franchise since the summer of 1972, reportedly asked $1 million.

Finley said in a telephone interview Tuesday that he had been negotiating with John Burton, a Stax official, and that all he could say at this point was that "we are close."

Finley, who suffered a heart attack last year, has been advised by his doctor to divest himself of his sports interests.

Shaw said Stax would keep the Tams in Memphis and was willing to put up the money necessary to improve the team.

A criticism of Finley has been that he did not devote attention to the team while it has floundered, suffering the worst record in the ABA last season and occupying last place in the league's Eastern Division this season.

Kansas City Chiefs sign top draft pick

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs begin their first off-season workouts Thursday with Woody Green, their top draft choice from Arizona State, safely tucked into the fold.

Coach Hank Stram announced Tuesday that the star halfback had signed with the National Football League Chiefs. Terms of the multi-year pact were not announced.

Green, who also was the No. 1 pick of Jacksonville in the new World Football League, said the opportunity to play with the Chiefs was a "once-in-a-lifetime dream. Ever since I was a little boy I wanted to play in the NFL."

In three years with the Sun Devils, the six-foot, 198-pound Green rushed for 3,806 yards.

Stram said the Chiefs could conceivably use Green as a running back, a receiver and on specialty teams.

The Chiefs coach also said he was making good progress in contract negotiations with other high draft choices. The second through fourth selections were Charlie Getty, offensive tackle from Penn State; David Jaynes, quarterback from the University of Kansas; and Matt Herkenhoff, offensive tackle from Minnesota.

Quarterfinals in Lexington

Tigers one win away from Columbia

By WARREN RIPLEY
Staff Sports Writer

"We'll go with what we've been doing," said Smithton head coach Steve Hunter Tuesday in reference to his team's clash with the Fairfax Bulldogs tonight at Wentworth Military Academy in Lexington in the quarterfinals of the State Class-A basketball tournament.

Smithton gained a foothold in Lexington on the strength of a 74-51 avalanche victory over Kansas City St. John's Monday night.

The Bulldogs from Fairfax also made short work of their opponents when they dispensed with DeKalb 67-48 Monday.

For the Tigers, this is their first trip to the quarter-finals. Smithton got as far as the first round in the 1957-58 season before losing to Bragg City in the first round of state play.

Fairfax presents a new problems for the Tigers, one that they've not had to contend with enroute to their 26-1 record. The Bulldogs will be the first team this season that Smithton has faced that starts a bigger front line.

Smithton will go with 6-6 Rusty Templemire, 6-5 Jay Teter and 6-2 Marvin Turner. Fairfax will counter with 6-8 Hal Kottman, 6-6 Mark Hawkins and 6-0 Rick Martin, the team's only senior starter.

Fairfax's front-line trio of Kottman, Martin and Hawkins has done most of the scoring for the Bulldogs. The same threesome scored in double figures in the victory over DeKalb.

Smithton also relies on their three front-liners, all of whom made all-conference this year, to carry most of its scoring load.

The Wednesday night battle will be a match-up of inside powers. Overall, however, Smithton will be taller. The Bengals' other two starters, point-man Eric Hopper and the outside-shooting guard Gene Anderson, both check in over 6-0, while the Bulldogs guard tandem of Greg Smith and Rick Payton are listed at 5-10 and 5-9 respectively. Payton had 11 points against DeKalb.

"We plan to go right at them," said Hunter. "According to our scouting reports, this Kottman kid tends to get into foul trouble."

"They'll fast-break like we do," remarked the Smithton mentor. "But they're not a pressing team like we are and they're younger and sometimes make young mistakes."

Smithton won the Windsor regional and the playoff with St. John's by a combined score of 138-102 and can make the final four at Columbia with a win Wednesday over Fairfax.

Fairfax, holds a 24-3 season slate, and was undefeated in 275 Conference play. The Bulldogs dropped two games to Mound

City this year before getting revenge late in the season. Their other loss came at the hands of Northeast Nodaway of Ravenwood.

The Bulldogs have compiled their impressive record under first-year coach Joel Walters. Walters, an Army veteran, taught in Iowa before coming to Fairfax.

The winner of the Fairfax-Smithton match will meet the winner of the Green City (27-1)-Glasgow (30-0) contest in Columbia Friday. Green City and Glasgow are both highly-rated teams.

At the other end of the Class-A bracket are Advance (22-9), last year's Class-S champion, and Crocker, which has a 27-3 mark. Those two square off at Washington. The other quarterfinal match-up pits Greenfield (26-3) against Walnut Grove (24-6) in Springfield.

The 4A quarterfinals are also on tap tonight across the state. Cape Girardeau (22-4) meets St. Louis Central (24-2) at Meramec Community College in Kirkwood. At Jefferson City, DeSmet (15-12) faces Raytown South (23-3); Kansas City Paseo (18-4) goes against crosstown rival Central (18-3) at the Interscholastic Fieldhouse. The other 4A quarterfinal is between St. Louis McCluer (27-2) and St. Louis Northwest (14-10).

NFLPA meeting ends today

Players want impartial arbitration and elimination of waiver procedure

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Football League's Players Association will wind up its convention Wednesday and advance its demands to league owners in Washington March 16.

The players came up with two demands Tuesday, impartial arbitration and elimination of the waiver procedure.

Bill Curry, president of the association, said, "We are now operating under the commission form of self government" in which the players are against NFL Commissioner Pete Roselle making the decisions in matters of arbitration.

They also feel that once a player is dropped from a team he has the right to renegotiate for himself instead of being waived from one team to another.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' association, considered the convention a success as 294 players and 70 wives attended the meetings that began Sunday.

Garvey said the group's first full convention touched on "freedom issues" which brought about divergent opinions.

"We are hearing from a lot of different people in these open discussions that we didn't hear from before when only the club player representatives were talking to each other."

The Players' Association also described as totally inadequate benefits under the player pension fund for widows of former players and for totally disabled former players.

The group contended that 10 former NFL players have died since 1970 and the highest payment to a widow has been $245 a month. The NFLPA contended that over half the widows received only $200 a month.

The association also contended that among eight former NFL players receiving permanent disability benefits — one with a broken neck receives $260 per month and two others are receiving $100 per month.

The basic contract between owners and players expired Jan. 31. So far the owners have decreed that the current program of medical insurance will terminate March 31.

Embittered by the owners' decision to cut off insurance funds, the players intend to fund their own insurance plan through the month of April.

Big shake up in college poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Take last week's top 15 college division teams in The Associated Press poll, shake them up from top to bottom, and the result is this week's listing. The names are the same but the placings have changed.

Only top-ranked Fairmont State and No. 15 Midwestern, Tex., showed up in the same places in the poll this week as last. The other 13 teams were scrambled.

Fairmont totaled 550 points and received 21 first-place votes in balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Fairmont, 272 for the season, beat Glenview State, Davis & Elkins and Shepherd last week.

Morgan State, the only team to beat NIT-bound Maryland-Eastern Shore this season, moved up three places into the No. 2 slot with 389 points.

In third place was Tennessee State, up from No. 8 last week after scoring two victories, one of them over Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Jackson State, which has completed its season, nevertheless gained one slot from No. 6 to No. 5. Behind

- Chattanooga were Kentucky Wesleyan, down four places from No. 3 to No. 7 after losing to Southwest Missouri last week, and Kentucky State, up two to eighth after winning twice last week, including an 81-67 trouncing of Transylvania.
- Roanoke and Alcorn A&M completed the top 10 — Roanoke up to ninth place from 12th after three victories last week, and Alcorn, which has completed its season, down one from No. 9 a week ago.
- Gardner-Webb, up three to No. 11, Evansville, in a dive from fourth to 12th, Wittenberg, down two from No. 11 to No. 13, Augustana, Ill. down one from No. 13 to No. 14, and Midwestern, unchanged at No. 15, completed the poll.

NL East preview

Mets rely on pitching

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Tom Seaver will be making about $170,000 this year—and he'll have to earn every cent. It won't be easy pitching for the New York Mets this year.

The defending National League champions have perhaps the strongest pitching staff in the East Division, but batters that won't break down too many fences.

"Any team with a Jerry Grote batting sixth can't be all good," is the wisecrack most heard at last year's World Series, which the Mets lost in seven games to the Oakland A's.

The Mets failed to come up with a big home run hitter in the off-season and therefore must again content themselves with playing a flock of low-run and one-run ballgames in 1974.

Seaver, of course, is king of the hill.

Often called baseball's premier pitcher, Seaver was certainly the most consistent for New York last season. He was voted the NL's Cy Young Award pitcher after winning 19 games and leading the league in earned run average with a 2.08 mark.

Jon Matlack, a power-throwing left-hander who won 14 games and carved out a 3.20 earned run average last season, combined with the formidable Seaver to give New York one of the best righty-lefty combinations in baseball.

Jerry Koosman, whose 2.84 ERA placed him in the top 10 last year along with Seaver, and George Stone, a 12-game winner in 1973, are the third and fourth starters—and give the Mets two more southpaws.

Rookie right-hander Craig Swann, veteran Ray Sadecki and Buzz Capra add more depth to the pitching-rich New Yorkers and give them good spot-starting or relief strength.

Tug McGraw, the highest paid and possibly the best relief pitcher in the National League, anchors a strong bullpen crew that also includes Harry Parker, Bob Miller and Bob Apodaca.

Rusty Staub, the Mets' right fielder, must stay healthy if the team is to have any offensive kick at all this year. The best all-around hitter on the team, Staub missed 100 games in 1972 because of operation on his right hand and missed several in 1973 because of an assortment of injuries.

In fact, not very many of the Mets were healthy last year. Every regular but third baseman Wayne Garrett was lost for some period or other in 1973 because of injuries.

If the hitting is bad, the defense is not bad. Shortstop Buti Harrelson and second baseman Felix Millan give the Mets a smooth double play combination and Grote is a fine defensive catcher even if not the best hitter.

Herndon Electric wins in Lions Club tourney

Three more teams were eliminated from the Sedalia Lions Club Independent Basketball Tournament field Tuesday night in the Agriculture Building on the Missouri State Fairgrounds.

Among those eliminated were Hamm's Over-the-Hill Gang of Sedalia and Whiteman Air Force Base.

Herndon Electric of Sedalia ousted Shawnee, Kan., 66-55 on the 24-point performance of 6-6 Marvin Davis. Also in double figures for Herndon were Virgil Tagtmeyer and Ward Kneist, both of whom scored 12.

Behind balanced scoring, Columbia Brothers jumped Whiteman 74-54. Six Columbia players were in double figures.

Carl Scott of Whiteman captured game scoring honors with 15.

Hamm's, one of the area's toughest independent teams, couldn't cope with the balanced scoring put up by the Boy's Club. Five players reached double figures for the Kansas City entry. Game honors, however, went to Merlyn McCown of Hamm's, who scored 26.

Ortenzio connects on three long ones

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Frank Ortenzio is a strong candidate for the designated hitter spot on the Kansas City Royals.

In a simulated game Tuesday, the 6-foot-2, 215-pound right-hander slammed three home runs for tremendous distance. Two were 400-plus foot drives and one clear the fence near the 360-foot sign at the foul line.

"Ortenzio's in the running," declared Manager Jack McKeon. "Picking the extra men might be the toughest job down here. Ortenzio is a first baseman and we've got one of the best in the game, John Mayberry. Ortenzio would have to make it as the D.H."

Last year Ortenzio missed spring training and wound up in the 2A Southern League with Jacksonville.

Local official to call finals

Foster McGuire, 2609 Stephenson, has been named as one of the officials for the national finals of the Hoop Shoot competition in Kansas City March 16.

The competition is sponsored by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, with the finals being held in conjunction with the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Basketball Tournament at Municipal Auditorium.

McGuire is the head baseball and assistant basketball coach at State Fair Community College.

Cards open spring season with Mets

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals were scheduled to play intrasquad games Wednesday and Friday as final tune-ups for Saturday's Grapefruit League opener with the New York Mets.

Cardinals manager Red Schoendienst said Tuesday that Alan Foster and Sonny Siebert, who figure to be in the starting rotation for St. Louis this season, will face the defending National League champions.

Ken Tatum, a four-year relief veteran at California and Boston before being sent to the minors in 1973, will pitch the final three innings against the Mets, Schoendienst said.

Foster was 13-9 with the Cardinals last year and Siebert managed was 8-12 at Boston and Texas.

LACEY, Wash. (AP) — Central Washington limited St. Martin's star Ron Sheets to 10 points in the second half Tuesday night to stage a come-from-behind 75-60 basketball victory over the Saints and earn a tournament berth.

The victory gave the Wildcats the District 1 berth in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics tournament that begins next week in Kansas City.

It will be the eighth trip to the tournament in 10 years for Central Coach Dean Nicholson. St. Martin's has never made it into the tourney.

Probation ends 49ers campaign

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Long Beach State closed out the best season in its history Tuesday night but the 49ers weren't in the mood to celebrate.

"We played a fine game tonight," said Coach Lute Olson after his club rolled past Fresno State 85-61. "I was very impressed with our players. I'm just very sorry the season has to end right here."

Long Beach, ranked ninth nationally, finished with a sparkling 24-2 record. The 49ers won their fifth straight Pacific Coast Athletic Association crown with a 12-0 record. But they will watch the NCAA playoffs on television while conference runnerup Los Angeles

State goes into the tourney. The 49ers are barred from the tourney due to an assortment of recruiting violations charged against former coach Jerry Tarkanian.

Glenn McDonald and Roscoe Pondexter scored 17 points apiece for the winners. Long Beach scored the first 12 points of the game and wrapped it up with a 17-4 streak midway through the second half.

Charles Bailey had 20 points for Fresno.

The 49ers were the only ranked team in action Tuesday night.

Elsewhere, Idaho State earned a berth in the NCAA Tournament by beating Montana 60-57 in a playoff for the Big Sky Conference championship. Steve Haynes scored 19 points and Jim Anderson 16 for the winners.

The Bengals will face New Mexico Saturday in Pocatello in round one of the playoffs.

St. John's, N.Y., headed for the NIT, closed out the regular season with a 20-6 record by thumping St. Francis, N.Y., 82-66. Ed Searcy and Mel Utley collected 25 points each for the Redmen.

Southern Illinois boosted its hopes for an NIT bid by burying Detroit 95-52 behind Joe Meriweather's 29 points and 14 rebounds. The Salukis, who lost to Detroit in overtime earlier in the year, close out the regular campaign with a 19-7 mark.

Seven-foot-three Roland Grant scored 34 points and pulled down 14 rebounds as New Mexico State romped over West Texas State 82-62. And Nevada-Las Vegas got 23 points from Bobby Florence to defeat Los Angeles-Loyola 84-73 and wind up the year with a 20-6 record.

South will win that first trick and probably cash all dummy's diamonds. Then if he tries the club finesse and if West has remembered to hang on to his five of spades, South will be down two.

If South has seen the handwriting on the wall he will cash his ace of clubs and get out for down one.

This last difference is relatively unimportant. The important thing is that East's third hand low play has resulted in defeat of the contract.

Improvisational acting in scene

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Improvisational acting is something you rarely see in television drama because of its tight schedules and lean-to-the-bone budgets.

But director Larry Peerce, who had employed it in theatrical films, was curious to see how it would work in his first movie for the home screen.

In improvisational acting, the performers know who they are and what their attitudes are, but work without scripted dialogue.

The picture is "The Stranger Who Looks Like Me," an ABC Movie of the Week airing tonight. It's about a young adopted girl who sets out to find her real parents and battles the red tape strung up to keep their identity secret.

Meredith Baxter plays the girl and her real-life mother, Whitney Blake, is cast as her biological mother. Beau Bridges is another adoptee who helps her in her search.

The improvised scene, which runs nearly five minutes, is an angry confrontation in which a group of adoptees argue for their right to know their real parents, background and heritage. Others defend the right to anonymity of parents who have given up children.

"It was in the script, all the dialogue, but we threw it away," said Peerce. "Everybody knew what their attitudes would be and who they were. They improvised the lines."

"I wanted to see what would happen in a real situation without words being put into their mouths. The realities that occurred in the scene couldn't have been written in a script."

Peerce directed the film for producer Lillian Gallo, an old friend who had helped him in the days when he directed episodes of such TV series as "The Monroes," "Batman," "The Green Hornet," "Wild Wild West" and "Judd for the Defense."

Peerce, the son of concert and opera tenor Jan Peerce, is a former actor who studied under Stella Adler. After leaving television he directed such movies as "The Incident," "Goodbye Columbus," "A Separate Peace" and "Ash Wednesday."

Impeachment inquiry centers on six areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 101-member House Judiciary Committee impeachment staff is ranging widely through the government and examining mountains of material in search of facts for its investigation.

In the most detailed report yet issued on the inquiry, the staff disclosed Tuesday it is gathering information on 55 separate activities involving the White House, President Nixon's re-election campaign and Nixon personally.

The investigation has been organized into six major areas, the largest dealing with allegations of White House involvement in the collecting of campaign contributions and in the use of executive agencies for political purposes.

The report lists 26 categories in this general area, many of them involving allegations that individuals and companies that contributed to Nixon's re-election campaign received favorable treatment from the government.

Among the 26 are allegations that the Department of Commerce failed to put into effect certain safety standards because of contributions by the industry involved, and that the Department of Interior failed to revoke an import allocation grant to an oil corporation that made a contribution.

Another major subject area covers allegations concerning domestic surveillance activities conducted by or at the direction of the White House.

It includes wiretaps placed on various newsmen in 1969, the disappearance from Washington of Dita Beard, the ITT lobbyist who turned up in a Denver hospital when Senate investigators wanted to question her, the activities of the Special Investigative Unit known as the plumbers, and the offer of the FBI directorship to the federal judge trying the Pentagon Papers case.

In the area concerning Watergate the investigation is divided into 13 categories, one of them involving allegations that executive clemency was offered to some of the men jailed for breaking into Democratic national headquarters.

Odd-even gas sales reduce station lines

By NICK TATRO
Associated Press Writer
State officials say odd-even gasoline sales plans have helped reduce long lines and quell squabbling among motorists at service station pumps.

Fourteen states and the District of Columbia are using variations of the distribution scheme, allowing motorists to get fuel every other day based on numbers on license plates or inspection decals. In six states the plans are mandatory.

At least seven states have such a system at the county or city level and still more are considering odd-even sales.

Officials, gasoline dealers and motorists surveyed by The Associated Press generally praised the odd-even system.

They said results varied, depending on whether the plan was voluntary or mandatory and on whether it was coupled with other measures, such as purchase limitations.

"It's working; it's working," said John Verani, Massachusetts consumer affairs secretary. "The lines are definitely down and in some cases almost disappeared."

The voluntary odd-even system began Feb. 11 in Massachusetts.

Verani said federal announcements that extra gasoline would be distributed in 26 states also helped curb panic buying.

Twenty-one towns have adopted the plan in Connecticut, where state energy of-

Hang gliding growing sport

SIMSBURY, Conn. (AP) — It was a risky day for flying. Gusts were whipping up to 25 miles an hour, curling around the launch site and rippling the bright green and yellow Dacron kite.

It was a day for hang gliders to be kept rolled up, a wind that could send man and kite crashing into the trees. Al Mulazzi knew it.

Fifty feet up the side of the narrow, tree-lined slope and strapped to the craft by a harness, Mulazzi clutched the aluminum trapeze bar beneath the 18-foot sail. He struggled to gain control against a fierce wind.

"It was probably one of the worst days for flying, very erratic winds," the 26-year-old adventurer would say when it was over.

The wind died down momentarily and Al was off. Six brisk steps down the slope and his billowing kite lofted him 10 feet off the ground. His lean body lay prone within the triangular trapeze bar, battling to use the headwind to prolong the glide.

Near the bottom of the hill, a crosswind, the bane of fliers, seized the ship and stalled it. Al landed roughly.

"Usually you land like a bird," he says.

There were three more flights that overcast day. The final one lasted 10 seconds, the longest and most satisfying.

"That last one was real nice. The wind had died down. It was real smooth," Al said. "I had plenty of air speed to take off all day. But the winds were very cross." Even though the flights lasted mere seconds, Al said the seconds stretch out to minutes.

"Your body becomes super-receptive and if you're not in stark terror you can look around and see what you're going to do. You can think your way through the flight."

Mulazzi and Mike Morrissey of Wethersfield are partners in a new firm, one of two on the East Coast, that makes hang gliders.

The relatively simple gliders sell for about $530 each. The sport boomed into popularity in the late 1960s in California.

The young entrepreneurs met at a hang gliding meet in North Carolina last July. Mike, 24 and now a veteran of about 100 glides, had never flown before. Al, an ex-Army paratrooper, had begun the previous November and by the time of the meet had picked up minor scrapes and a few busted hang gliders.

Al hopes to try soon for the hang gliding altitude record. He sees himself being towed up to 20,000 feet by a balloon and with kite firmly clutched in his hands and oxygen and emergency parachutes on his back, letting go. He says he's looking for a spot without airplane traffic.

The current record of 14,350 feet was set last summer when somebody jumped off Pike's Peak, he says.

House committee urged to kill busing amendment

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A number of opponents to a proposed constitutional amendment that would prohibit use of state funds for busing across school district lines urged a House committee Tuesday night to kill the proposal.

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee heard testimony lasting over two hours on the proposed amendment, sponsored by Rep. Harry Gallagher, D-Kansas City.

Before becoming a part of the constitution, the issue would have to be submitted to the voters.

Gallagher said he introduced the proposal as a result of a suit filed by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Kansas City, which could have resulted in busing students 50 to 60 miles.

He said the suit has since been dismissed, however he thought the issue should be resolved because of possible renewal of the suit and other similar efforts.

Gallagher said the issue was not one of racism, but "a matter of fairness to the taxpayers."

He said he felt both blacks and whites in his district would favor the effort.

Testifying against the proposal, Sen. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, said he sees "the issue of busing raising its ugly head."

He said he felt busing was not the answer to all problems, but thought it served a purpose in exposing children to social backgrounds different from their own.

"We must not take the risk of returning to the kind of segregation, fear and misunderstanding" that led to busing originally, he said.

Howard said if the proposal comes out of the committee it will probably lead to long floor fights in the House and Senate.

It would also increase the risk of racial polarization, he said.

Federal court orders would probably supersede the Missouri Constitution at any rate, said Howard, and in that case the amendment would have no practical effect.

Adelaide Schlafly, of the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, said, "a statewide vote on this issue would inevitably divide and polarize Missouri citizens."

"However explained or justified," she said, "it is basically racist in its intent. We strongly oppose putting racism back into the constitution of Missouri."

She also read a statement opposing the amendment from Edward J. Foote, Dean of the Washington University school of law.

Mrs. Lloyd Thomas, representing the League of Women Voters, told the committee the organization considered busing "a reasonable method" for achieving integration.

Grace Donaldson of the Kansas City chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said while the organization does not advocate busing as a total solution, it considers busing a tool for achieving equality in education.

Mrs. J. Robert Trevor, representing the Missouri Congress of Parents and Teachers, was the only witness in favor of the proposal.

She said the organization had adopted a resolution in October, 1972 opposing busing across school district lines.

She said busing for extended periods each day would have an undesirable effect upon students because the long bus rides would prevent them from engaging in other activity.

Committee chairman Howard Hines, D-Independence, said he was not sure whether the issue would be voted on by the committee.

He said if committee sentiment exists to send the issue to the floor of the House, a session will be held to vote on the matter. Otherwise, he said, no vote will probably be taken.

The House Civil and Criminal Procedure Committee began consideration of a giant bill to revise the state's criminal code Tuesday night.

Committee chairman Harold Holliday, D-Kansas City, said a final committee report on the revision was not issued Tuesday night because of a number of amendments to the measure, some of which have not been formally completed.

The committee meeting was delayed almost an hour because an evening session of the House lasted until nearly 7 p.m. and was followed by a dinner party for legislators given by House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, D-St. Louis.

People in the news

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor have received honorary diplomas from Mexican President Luis Echeverria for promoting the resort town of Puerto Vallarta, where the stage couple has a home.

Asked at a news conference Tuesday about his political ideology, Burton said, "Since I was born poor, from a miner's family, my leanings are obviously toward the left."

But he added, "I'm not as leftist as my good friend President Tito (of Yugoslavia) or Mr. (Leonid) Brezhnev (of the Soviet Union)."

Quizzed about President Nixon, the energy crisis and the resignation of British Prime Minister Edward Heath, Burton retorted, "You people are asking strange questions. I thought you were going to ask me about my private life."

But Burton stopped smiling and refused to comment when a newsman asked him about the recent rift in his marriage to Miss Taylor.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven-year-old Tammy Bryant, the 1974 National Easter Seal child, gave First Lady Pat Nixon an Easter Seal button and a key to Tammy's home town of Key West, Fla.

Shy but smiling, Tammy posed for pictures with Mrs. Nixon in the White House on Tuesday.

Tammy suffered brain damage in an automobile accident five years ago, but her mother, Mrs. Kenneth I. Bryant, said physical therapy and speech therapy have helped Tammy to have an almost normal life.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Asst. Secretary of State William J. Casey has received Senate Banking Committee approval to become president of the Export-Import Bank.

The approval came Tuesday following a three-month delay. Questions had been raised about Casey's actions while serving as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission during its investigation of financier Robert L. Vesco. Casey denied tampering with the probe.

Democrats are foiled in bid for GOP seat

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Republicans retained firm control on a Southern California congressional seat today after turning back Democratic efforts to capitalize on the Watergate issue.

Republican State Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, 47, swept to victory over a field of seven Democratic candidates in a special election Tuesday. He was the only GOP contender.

Lagomarsino characterized it as a personal victory based on his record of 13 years in the California Legislature and not a vote of confidence for the Nixon administration or a referendum on Watergate.

"It is an indication that people will vote for a Republican if they think that he is the best man running for the job," he told newsmen early Wednesday.

His chief Democratic opponent, Ojai Mayor James Loeb, attempted to portray Lagomarsino as a party "loyalist" with unwavering support of the administration.

"People know I am not that way. They trust me. They know I'm honest," he said.

The soft-spoken lawyer, businessman and rancher from Ojai said he hopes to take his House seat next week. He described himself as "a moderate conservative" who has an open mind on the question of whether Nixon should be impeached.

The special election was called to fill the vacancy created by the death on New Year's Day of Rep. Charles M. Teague, a Republican who represented the 13th Congressional District for almost two decades.

Under California law, Tuesday's balloting in Ventura and Santa Barbara counties essentially was a primary election. But Lagomarsino won it outright by compiling 53 per cent of the vote against the total collected by the seven Democrats.

With more than 90 per cent of the vote counted, Lagomarsino had 51,987 to a combined total of 45,232 for the seven opponents. Loeb was second with 18,416 votes.

Democrats hold a 48-45 registration margin in the district, but it has been considered safe Republican territory since the early 1960s.

Democrat wins in GOP stronghold

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Gleeeful Democrats chanted "Nixon must go!" as Thomas A. Luken joined the victory party after winning an election for Ohio's 1st District seat in Congress.

Luken is only the fourth Democrat this century to win the usually Republican stronghold in Cincinnati. He was the third Democrat this year to wrest away formerly GOP seats in special congressional elections.

Officials of both parties placed varying degrees of blame on President Nixon and Watergate for the GOP loss in Ohio.

Luken gave his own version of the election results Tuesday night. "The voters of the 1st District of Ohio have expressed their concern about the nature of this administration and our society."

The final unofficial vote from all 478 precincts gave Luken 55,171 votes, or 52 per cent of the total, while Republican Willis D. Gradison Jr. had 51,057, or 48 per cent. About half the eligible voters in the Cincinnati-area district cast ballots. In comparison, Nixon polled 67 per cent of the district's vote when he won re-election in 1972. Republican William J. Keating, who created the vacancy when he resigned to become president of The Cincinnati Enquirer, received 70 per cent of the vote in 1972.

In Washington, the White House declined comment on the election.

Gov. John J. Gilligan, the last Democrat before Luken to win the 1st District seat back in 1964, said Luken's victory was "a tremendous repudiation of the Nixon administration... not just Watergate, but everything the administration has stood for."

Robert S. Strauss, the Democratic national chairman, said it showed voters were turning to the Democrats because of "Republican failure to come to grips with the many serious problems confronting the nation."

Gradison, in his concession speech, acknowledged that Watergate "has been one of many factors in the election." However, he said "an election so close, in my judgment, does not indicate a particularly clear mandate."

More steel price hikes announced

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Taking advantage of a recent Cost of Living Council ruling, three more major steel producers have announced a second series of increases in four days.

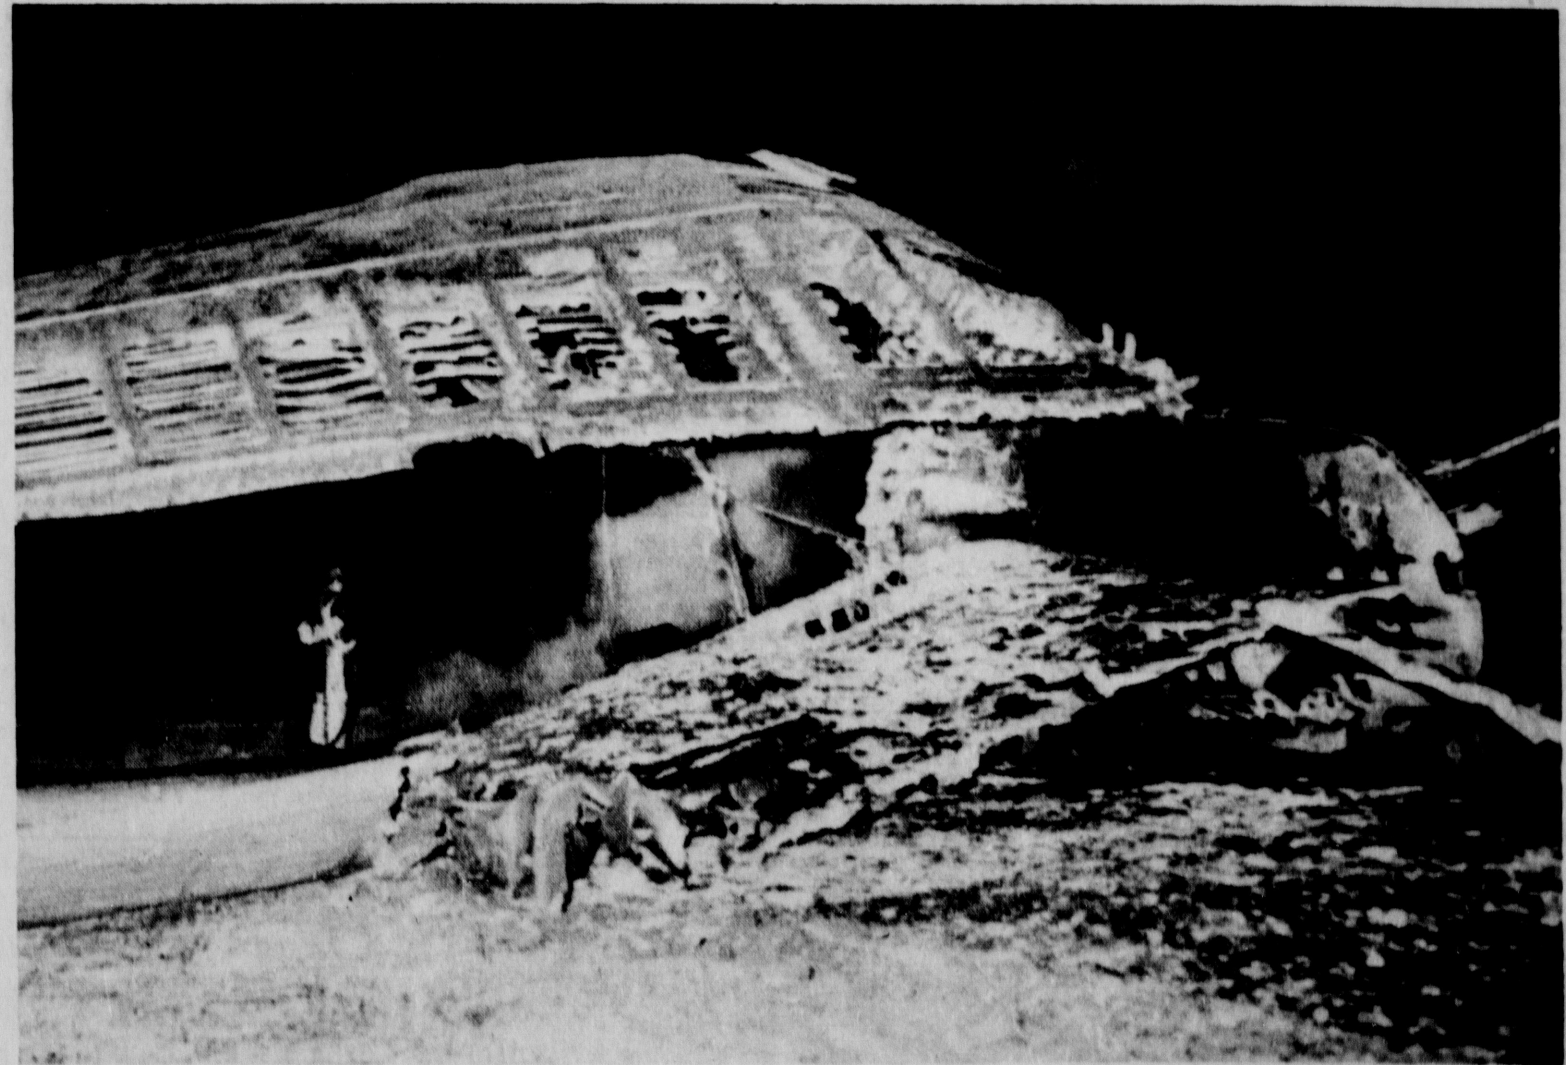

National Steel Corp., the nation's third-largest steelmaker, announced hikes Tuesday on cold rolled and hot rolled sheets. The increases go into effect Wednesday and amount to about five per cent, the company said.

On Saturday, National announced price hikes on several other lines. The latest increases involve about 40 per cent of its product mix. National said, products widely used in the manufacture of automobiles, home appliances and other consumer durables.

The increases were made under terms of the Cost of Living Council's Special Rule 6, which permitted the industry to pass on to customers cost increases incurred through Jan. 31.

Others announcing price hikes Tuesday were Armco, the fifth-largest domestic steel producer; No. 6 Jones & Laughlin; and eleventh-ranked Allegheny Ludlum, a specialty producer.

A spokesman for Armco said the company's increases cover "many products." He said Armco had not determined the percentage of the increase or which specific product lines would be affected.

Crash in Wichita

A man inspects the tail section of a KC 135 tanker which crashed and burned about 3:45 a.m. Tuesday shortly after take-off from a Wichita airport. Two of the seven on board were killed, the others injured. The tanker had 17,000 gallons of fuel aboard. Officials reported the plane seemed to lose power on take-off.

Reward offered for recovery of balloonist

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $10,000 reward has been offered for information leading to the safe recovery of missing balloonist Thomas Gatch Jr.

The adventurer's two sisters put up the reward Tuesday to spur further efforts in the search for Gatch, a 46-year-old bachelor from Alexandria, Va.

Gatch was trying to become the first man to cross the Atlantic Ocean in a balloon. He was last seen Feb. 21 by a Librarian ship about 1,200 miles west-southwest of the Canary Islands.

Offering the reward are his sisters, Eleanor Armstrong Hoaglan and Nancy Gatch Svien, both of Rochester, Minn.
